Martha's Memos

Children Eat Best When Free From Pressures

by Martha Morgan

This noon 5-year-old Mark Lyle was my luncheon guest and we had a lovely time. He's outgoing and talkative, so the conversation was lively. But most pleasing was his attitude about the food served him. He enjoyed every bite.

No problem seems to plague mothers so much as this one of getting children to eat. Authorities counsel constantly against over-pressing the problem. They claim if food is treated matter-of-factly, children will accept it the same way. At Mark's house they approach mealtime on the basis of good sportsmanship. Dad works to buy the food; mother takes time to fix it; any good sport would at least give it a try!

As a matter of fact, gentle guidance at the table can teach children many good traits: appreciation, thoughtfulness, courtesy, as well as good sportsmanship. And statistics show that children who eat all three meals with their families are better integrated socially than those who eat by themselves.

When Carma picked up Mark, he told her about the good dessert we had that used chocolate cookies. It's a good thing children like this kind of dessert, for its use of Morning Milk makes it valuable in supplying part of the daily food needs.

I told Carma she'd find the recipe in Morning Milk's new little cook book "Morning Milk's Family Treats." Any one can get the book simply by sending a post card to me, Martha Morgan, P.O. Box 176-B1, Salt Lake City, Utah. But so Carma would not have to wait, I copied the recipe for her on the spot!

CHOCOLATE LIME DELIGHT
(Makes 8 to 12 servings)
25 to 30 thin chocolate cookies
3 tablespoons melted butter
1 1/2 cups (large can) undiluted MORNING MILK
1 package (3 ounces) lime-flavored gelatin
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup hot water
1/2 cup lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
4 drops green food coloring

Butter 10-inch spring form pan. Line sides with 12 or more cookies. Crush remaining cookies. Mix with butter; place mixture in bottom of pan, saving 1/4 cup for topping. Combine gelatin and sugar. Add hot water; stir until gelatin is consistency of unbeaten egg whites. Chill Morning Milk in refrigerator tray until soft ice crystals form around edges of tray (20 to 25 minutes). Whip until stiff (about 2 minutes). Add remaining 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Whip very stiff (about 2 minutes longer). Fold cooled gelatin mixture, lemon rind and food coloring into whipped Morning Milk. Spoon over cookie crumbs. Use remaining crumbs to decorate top. Chill 4 hours until firm.
