CHOLESTEROL LEVEL DOESN'T INCREASE IN ONE MALE GROUP

By DELOS SMITH
UPI Staff Writer

NEW YORK (UPI)—In one tribe of human beings the cholesterol blood levels of the males do not increase with age, according to new and impressive evidence. That's exciting because it is contrary to previous scientific findings concerning human males. Increasing blood levels of that fatty blood substance, cholesterol, has been repeatedly indicted as a prime cause of "hardening" of the arteries which, in turn, leads to heart attacks, the number one killer of males in their prime. In science a single exception shatters any rule. If increasing years do not make a rise in masculine cholesterol levels inevitable, then the tendency of the levels to rise in most males as they get older, has to be due to their circumstances rather than to their masculinity.

The new evidence indicates that the males of the tribe of Yemenite Jews are the exception. These males had already attracted much scientific wonderment because they seem all but immune to heart attacks. Drs. Daniel Brumber, Gideon Manolis, and K. Loeb, research scientists in the government hospital, Jaffa, Israel, made exhaustive measurements of the fatty substances in the blood of 7 of these males, 41 of them between 18 and 29 years old and 35 between 30 and 50. There were no significant differences in cholesterol levels between the young group and the older one. They made the same measurements in 160 Jews of Eastern and Western European origin, (the Ashkenazi Jews.) Forty-five of these were 18 to 20 years old and the remainder were between 30 and 52. Here the difference between cholesterol blood levels between young and not-so-young was found to be approximately the difference found in males of other races and climes in the previous investigations which in their aggregate had caused many scientists to think that aging inevitably increased the blood cholesterol levels of males. These previous investigations had been of such diverse males as groups in Minnesota, New York City, Italy, Sweden, and the Bantus of South Africa. The incidence of male heart attacks is high in the United States and Northern Europe, but low in Italy and among the Bantus. Very Special Tribe The Yemenite Jews are a very special tribe which lived a segregated life for 2,000 years in Central Arabia before it immigrated to Israel 10 years ago. Since then they have been living with the Ashkenazi Jews whose blood cholesterol patterns were shown to be of the general pattern of Europe from which they originated. In reporting to the International Technical Journal, "The Lancet," the scientists said their studies showed that a rise with age in cholesterol blood levels was "not an inevitable physiological phenomenon." They suggested that differences in the modes of living of the Yemenite and the Ashkenazi Jews must account for their differences in blood chemistry. Those living differences remain to be investigated.

77-Year-Old Plans To Walk To Missouri

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI)—Mrs. Lou Ash, who will be 77 years old on July 1, explained to authorities why she decided to walk to Missouri.

"When I take a notion to go some place, I just up and go," she said. She told sheriff's deputies who picked her up on a highway Tuesday that she wasn't worried at all about the trip. "I knew I'd make it," she explained.

Mrs. Ash, looking for all the world like Whittier's Mother in a neat grey dress and checkered, lace-trimmed apron, said she had "taken a notion" to go home to Southwest City, Mo., so she "up and went" by the nearest highway. She had been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Anne Serber, in a Sacramento trailer court "for about two weeks." She pinned her wallet, containing $5, in a pocket of her dress and claimed "it was enough to get me where I was going."

She maintained that her daughter knew she was going, but Mrs. Serber said her mother slipped away without her knowledge. Well, anyway, said the aged woman, her daughter knew better than to try to stop her. And she still intends to return to Missouri, one way or another.
