SUMMERVILLE (Special)—Mr. and Mrs. George Bewley of Imbler are announcing the engagement of their daughter, Joyce Elaine to LaVern Miller.

In And Around Town

Mrs. Lillie Mattox arrived home from Portland following a visit with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Kertsey and Judith.

While there she saw the Rose Parade and Centennial show, which she reports as beautiful.

Lt. Col. and Mrs. Walter Buckley, daughter Sandra, and Mrs. Buckley's mother, Mrs. Kohler, arrived here last week. They were dinner guests of Mrs. Lillie Mattox. Mrs. Buckley's son, Kenneth was also present. Mrs. Kohler stayed with her mother, Mrs. L. Mattox for a few days. They visited other relatives and friends then returned to her home at Union.

Buckleys visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. Buckley, and friends. They are now at Wallowa Lake where they are building a cabin.

A man is a success when he actually can believe he is the sort of man his mother thinks he is and his mother-in-law hopes he will become.—Burton Hillis in Better Homes & Gardens magazine.

Fashion Takes Humane Shape In Fall Shoes For Women

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Staff Writer

NEW YORK (UPI)—A more "humane" shape to women's shoes is on the way.

This is a fashion step which will please the women who have protested that needle-point toes curl their toes and to the men who have looked on them as lethal weapons.

Toes on everything but evening shoes will be rounder for fall. But those special event shoes will be just as pointed as ever—even to the extreme of "double needle," the industry's term for a toe twice as sharp as the "single needle."

Heels on daytime shoes are to be firmer, which will take away some of the dread of treading on a grating.

"We see daytime shoes having a modified, slender toe, softly rounded," said David Evans, one of the leading designers of high-style and high-priced ($39 and up per pair) footwear.

"But we will not return to the short vamp, baby-doll look of the late 1930's and '40's. Bizarre shapes also are out."

"The oval look is the new look," said a spokesman for the National Shoe Institute. "A more humane toe—a flattened, tapered oval."

In heels, the trend is toward slivers of leather or wood piled smoothly on the other. But for dressy occasions, the skinnier "stacked" for daytime—thin spike which catches in gratings, escalators and door mats will go right into fall 1959 and spring 1960.

"I doubt if fashion ever will go back to the fat clumsy heel of pre-war years," said Evans.

As a staunch supporter of the skinnier heel as the most flattering ever invented for the female foot, I hope Evans is right. I'm for the stiletto shape, despite its dangers on finances—for heel replacement when breakage occurs. And, despite the ailing gripes of my shoemaker that "lady, I can't put a new tap on that...there's no room for a nail."

But the industry says it has both these problems pretty well whipped. The new stilettos come in "unbreakable" plastic, have a steel spike through the center, or are of all steel.

Manufacturers also have developed "lifetime lifts" which screw on instead of nail on. Some of the heels with a central metal shank still have wood for the repairman to nail to. "Only he's got to use small nails," said Bill Valentine, a designer at Herbert Levine's.

The Shoe Institute forecasts a "whole new interest" in this medium heel for daytime. This is from 14 notes to 18 eighth. Other lengths from toe to heel: Higher vamps are forecast for fall.

Some manufacturers, Levine included, continue with the elongated look to both daytime and evening shoes, but with the point sliced off for a "squared" look.

The high heel is a long-time fashion in footwear—some sources credit its invention to Leonardo da Vinci, better known for his painting of "The Last Supper." In any case, say historians at the Taphagen School of Fashion, the first high, curved heels were an established fashion by the late 16th and early 17th centuries.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Cline and son, and Mr. and Mrs. Orie Cline, all from Salt Lake are visitors in the home of Mrs. Ida Cline. They are visiting old time friends and relatives. They were former Unionists.

Hollow out a piece of driftwood or other weathered wood to make a natural unusual "vase for flower arrangements." The July issue of Better Homes & Gardens magazine suggests sawing the bottom of the piece of wood flat, so it will stand squarely on a table. Then, sand and wax the wood until the finish is smooth.

"Let's talk dry cleaning"

By Ed Craig

The term we regularly use for our cleaning method is "dry cleaning." Yet quite often your dry cleaner must also be an expert in "wet cleaning." Many of the stains which soil clothes require wet cleaning or even washing to remove. Such common summertime stains as those from alcoholic beverages and soft drinks are examples. Ice cream and many food stains are water soluble and are best removed by water or moisture. Perspiration is another staining agent which may have to be removed by wet cleaning in those areas where it has left the heaviest deposits and caused stiffening of the fabric. This problem occurs most often during the hot weather months as the result of repeated perspiration. In addition, dry cleaners sometimes turn to moisture spotting where soil is deeply imbedded in a fabric to such an extent that water is needed to loosen it. In all such cases, wet cleaning is a supplement to dry cleaning. Whatever is needed to restore your fine garments to like-new condition, clean and fresh and wrinkle-free, you can be sure of the finest cleaning when you call on our experience.
