

PRESIDENT, CONGRESS CONFLICT MAY BURST INTO FIREWORKS

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The smoldering conflict between President Eisenhower and the Democrat-controlled Congress over what's best for the country burst into political fireworks this week.

Eisenhower stamped "veto" on wheat and tobacco price support bills.

Congress rejected the President's appeals to raise the gasoline tax and abolish the interest rate ceiling on long-term government bonds. It approved a $1,375,400,000 housing bill which Eisenhower may veto.

Moving through the legislative pipeline are other measures the chief executive opposes—a tax cut, an increased medical research budget, a states rights bill. The Senate stung the President just a week ago by rejecting his nominee for commerce secretary, Lewis L. Strauss.

Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson has tried to make some major legislation and spending programs "veto proof" by modifying original proposals to meet Eisenhower's complaints. For this a few liberal Democrats and organizations accused him of surrendering to the President's economy demands.

Johnson replied, "we'll seek the best and do the possible."

Congress and the White House were not completely at odds. The lawmakers granted Eisenhower's request to boost the emergency national debt limit to a peacetime record of 295 billion dollars for one year. They increased the permanent ceiling to 285 billion instead of the 268 billion the President asked.

Eisenhower said he vetoed the wheat and tobacco bills because they were "backward bills because they were 'backwards' steps which would not ease farm troubles.

Democrats felt the vetoes would cost the GOP votes in the 1950 congressional and presidential elections, especially in the Midwest wheat belt. Some Republicans agreed privately.

The Senate refused to hike the federal gas tax despite two warnings by Eisenhower that work on the 41,000-mile interstate super-highway network virtually would cease without the new funds.

Other congressional news: Payrolls: The Senate in a surprise move voted to open to public inspection the payroll records of its employees. The move was the result of public furor over disclosures of congressional nepotism.

Rackets: Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.) accused Teamsters President James R. Hoffa of failure to keep his promise to oust crooked union officials. Hoffa, appearing at one of the last sessions of the Senate Rackets Committee, replied that he was not going to be "stamped" into firing anyone until he investigated each case thoroughly.

States Rights: The House approved an administration-opposed states rights bill under which the courts could not rule that a federal law nullified a similar state statute unless there was a direct conflict or Congress agreed.

Nuclear War: A parade of scientists painted a grim picture of the toll of an H-bomb war. They told a congressional atomic subcommittee 48,900,000 Americans would be killed and another 25,000,000 maimed. Radiation, famine, disease and natural catastrophes would continue for perhaps 1,000 years. But, they predicted, mankind would survive.

Budget: The Senate approved a $4,056,746,581 money bill for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare. It was the first Senate appropriation this year which carried more money than the President asked.

Neuberger was beaten early Friday, 46 to 33, when he offered such an amendment to the corporate-excess tax extension bill.

The issue posed by the amendment still remains, he said, "Will the $39,900,000,000 interstate highway program be financed on a pay as we go basis through user taxes or will it be with deficit financing, which means huge sums wasted in high interest rates on the debt?"

President Eisenhower has been pressing Congress to boost the tax from three to four and one-half cents, as Neuberger urged, with no success. Many legislators expect Congress to wind up by deciding to transfer the needed funds from the treasury.

N. Y. STOCKS

NEW YORK (UPI)—Stocks moved ahead smartly all along the line today in slightly reduced trading.
The market hit its best levels of the day around 1 p.m. when the industrial average was at a new all-time high. Profit taking set in at that time which brought down the average from its best level.
Despite profit taking, individual gains of a point or more were numerous in the main list and new highs exceeded new lows once again.

The steels stood out on the upside. Gains of 2 points or more at the highs appeared in Youngstown, Inland and Lukens. Advances of around a point or more appeared in a long list of other steels.

Texaco was the feature of a higher oil group. Tobaccos, which are receiving favorable investment comment, scored some good gains. Liggett & Myers was up around 3 at its best and American Tobacco and Lorillard were strong.

Motors were generally firm. Chemicals favored the upside with the exception of DuPont. The rails scored gains running to around a point in some of the leaders. The electronics had gains running past a point.

Neuberger Says He'll Submit Bill On Gas Tax Again

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Richard L. Neuberger (D-Ore.) says he will reoffer his amendment boosting the federal motor fuel tax 1½ cents a gallon when another revenue bill comes up this session.

Neuberger was beaten early Friday, 46 to 33, when he offered such an amendment to the corporate-excess tax extension bill.

The issue posed by the amendment still remains, he said, "Will the $39,900,000,000 interstate highway program be financed on a pay as we go basis through user taxes or will it be with deficit financing, which means huge sums wasted in high interest rates on the debt?"

Peronistas, Communists Fail To Oust Frondizi, Austerity Regime

Man-of-the-week: President Arturo Frondizi of Argentina. The quote: Buenos Aires. "The place: 'I just wanted to say hello to you and tell you I am fulfilling my constitutional duties.'"

It was a typical low-keyed statement from the thin, studious man who, by the age of 22, had earned a reputation as a sort of South American Don Quixote who tilted against the windmills of dictatorship and went to prison for his pains.

Now, at the age of 50, he was telling assembled Argentine and foreign newsmen that he had just weathered the worst crisis of his 13-month-old government.

Whether he would be in office next week, or the week after that, remained a question.

But for the moment, Frondizi represented a triumph of constitutional government in a nation not long emerged from ruinous dictatorship. For the moment also he was free to continue the austerity campaign by which he hoped to rescue Argentina from the heritage of bankruptcy left by the dictatorship of Juan D. Peron.

Bankruptcy Trouble
Argentine bankruptcy was at the root of Frondizi's troubles, but exploiting it were the former Peronistas, encouraged and reportedly at least partly financed by Peron, and the Communists who kept the country in unceasing industrial strife. There was, in addition, the plight of the wage earners who were being asked to pay in months for the excesses of years—who saw their wages frozen while prices spiraled steadily upward.

Frondizi had promised from the first that the way would be hard and he stood firm in the face of mounting opposition.

In the present crisis, he owed part of his strength to the fact his opposition was divided.

One group demanded that he resign and be replaced by a provisional government of armed force officers. They were the Golpistas, literally translated, those desiring a military coup.

A second group demanded that Frondizi stay in office but submit himself to close control by the armed forces.

A third group wanted his resignation, to be followed by an interim government headed by the president of the Supreme Court until elections could be held.

Military Brings Pressure
As in the ouster of Peron, heaviest pressure came from the armed services, notably the army and the navy.

Paradoxically, while the public outcry had been against Frondizi's austerity campaign, the move for his removal seemed to center on demands that he be even more severe.

The demands included: additional changes among government ministers to eliminate Peronista and leftist sympathizers; stricter application of economic policies designed to enforce Frondizi's austerity program and the firing of some 12,000 Peronistas and Communists from public payrolls.

Politically, Frondizi's troubles spring from the election support he received from the Peronistas and Communists, which aroused armed services suspicions, and from his own intransigent radical party, which has protested abandonment of the more nationalistic policies in favor of gigantic financial help from abroad.

Whatever Frondizi's troubles, his policies have been paying off. From an annual deficit of 300 million dollars a year, Argentina's trade balance for the first four months of 1959 showed a credit of 102 million dollars.

Polaris Rocket Test Firing Is Termed Success

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI)—Another Polaris test rocket shot aloft atop a column of smoke today in an apparently successful firing.

The 28-foot rocket, a forerunner of the Navy's submarine-launched ballistic missile, vaulted from its launching pad at 8:42 a.m. p.d.t.

It climbed with a roar and the characteristic speed of the solid fuel rocket, trailing a wide plume of smoke. About 50 seconds after blast off, the smoke trail forked in the clear sky, indicating that the first stage had separated from the upper section of the rocket.

After 90 seconds of flight, the smoke trail disintegrated, seemingly indicating that the rocket's thrust had terminated. If all went well, the test rocket's dummy nose cone separated and continued on its way across the ocean.

Informed sources said that preliminary data from the test rocket showed it achieved all its test objectives. If analysis of telemetry data proves this correct, it would be the third time in 10 firings of the current test series that the rocket has behaved exactly as planned.
