ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann: Over a year ago I married a nice woman who has a 10-year-old daughter by a former marriage.

We went away on a little wedding trip. My wife's mother took care of the girl in our absence.

The first night we were at home the girl wanted to sleep with her mother. My wife asked if I'd mind sleeping in the guest room for a night or two, until the child got used to having me in the house. I said "O.K."

It's 13 months now and I'm still in the guest room and the kid is sleeping with her mother. I told my wife seven or eight times that enough is enough and it's time the girl got accustomed to the idea that I'm her stepfather.

My wife says she doesn't want to injure the child emotionally and that I should stop acting like "an animal." May I have some advice?—Displaced.

Dear Displaced: Your wife is fostering this neurotic dependency in the child because she's pretty much of a child herself. In plain English the arrangement is mighty comfortable for both "kids" because your wife doesn't want to be a wife. She needs professional help. If she refuses to see a doctor and put the child back in her own room where she belongs, you have every right to see a lawyer. The arrangement you describe is no marriage. You are merely living in a house and paying the bills.

Dear Ann Landers: Our little boy was born last month with a purple birthmark on his neck. This mark covers about four inches and I'm afraid it will be with him forever.

My wife's grandmother who is from the old country told my wife this birthmark is a punishment because she stole plums from a neighbor's tree when she was a little girl.

My wife is not a stupid person but Ann, she actually believes this rubbish and it's making her miserable. Will you say something to give her peace of mind? Can anything be done about the baby's birthmark?—Concerned Dad.

Dear Dad: Ask the witch doctor if she has a license to practice in this country. There's absolutely no connection between birthmarks and plums stolen from anybody's tree. A birthmark can happen to anyone. It appears for no apparent reason and without explanation. Consult a dermatologist about the new techniques for removing port-wine stains (This sounds like one.) Some can be taken off completely.

Mr. & Mrs. Taxpayer:

YOU

have an obligation to vote in the special election for UNION COUNTY SCHOOL DISTRICT REORGANIZATION

Monday, July 20th

SCHOOL DISTRICT POLLS OPEN 2:00 to 8:00 P.M.

Proposed Districts:

The Union County Committee For School District Reorganization proposes TWO administrative districts—

DISTRICT R-2, which comprises all of Union County except the North Powder Joint District and Pondosa.

DISTRICT R-3, which comprises the joint Baker and Union County High School District in the North Powder area.

Why You Should Vote In Support of the School District Reorganization Proposal:

After many discussions, studies and recommendations, your Union County Committee For the Reorganization of School Districts, in conformance with the State Reorganization Law, voted to adopt the two-district system. Listed below are some of the specific reasons supporting the adoption of the two-district plan.

- 1—The plan provides effective county administration of the entire school system.
2—It offers a coordinated education program for the entire county school system, covering uniformity of text selection, savings on texts through redistribution, services of one specialist in several schools, no loss in educational continuity to the student who changes schools within the county.
3—It offers advantages and savings in central buying of supplies.
4—It will provide special education teachers to all schools in the district.
5—All schools in the reorganized districts will have available to them film service, visual and audio aids.
6—Savings are foreseen in interest on bond levies within the proposed plan.
7—The plan will provide long range building and planning for all segments of the district.
8—The plan offers more efficient transportation, equalization of teacher work loads, more efficient use of buildings and improved assignment of students per school.
9—A more permanent equalization of the tax load foreseen with approval of the plan.
10—The plan will relieve the teaching principal from time and labors previously put in budget studies, purchases of supplies, and general business management, providing him with much greater opportunity for closely checking the quality of instruction.
11—This plan provides for a 3-man local committee, where each school attendance unit is established, to act in an advisory capacity with the new school board.

Your Committee has studied and considered a number of plans during the 18 months' preparation for school district reorganization. The plan submitted by your Committee for your support offers the greatest good for the greatest number of people. It has met with general public acceptance in meetings and discussion groups. It conforms to the state law.
