PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Willie Mays tried to score Hank Aaron with the inning run, climaxing a two-run eighth inning rally which gave the National League a 5-4 victory over the American League in the 26th annual All-Star Game today.

The underdog American leaguers had scored three runs in the top of the eighth to take the lead, 4-3, just before the roof caved in on Whitey Ford, the New York Yankees southpaw.

Taking over in the bottom of the eighth, Ford, the fourth pitcher used by Manager Casey Stengel of the American League, yielded a single to Ken Boyer, pinch-hitting for winning pitcher Johnny Antonelli. Dick Groat sacrificed Boyer to second and Hank Aaron then singled to score Boyer with the tying run.

Mays, who had gone hitless in three previous times at bat, rifled a fast ball to deep right center, over center fielder Harvey Kuenn's glove, and Aaron raced home with the run that gave the 11-10 National League favorites the triumph.

It broke a two game American League winning streak in this mid-summer game and was the National League's 11th victory against 15 defeats in All-Star competition.

The American Leaguers made a bid in the top of the ninth against Don Elston, Chicago Cubs relief ace. Elston retired the first two hitters but Nellie Fox then singled after missing a home run by two feet down the right field line. Fox went to second on a wild pitch.

Kuenn rifled one out of the park down the left field line, but it was foul by 12 feet. Kuenn worked the count to three and two and then popped to third baseman Boyer to close it out.

Gus Triandos, whom Stengel had refused to let hit in the clutch last year, had doubled with the bases loaded in the eighth, sending the Americans into a 4-3 lead.

Soviet Rocket Is Sighted As Proof That Man Will Soon Be In Space

LONDON (UPI) — Soviet scientists today hailed the rocket flight of two dogs and a rabbit as proof that man will soon be flying through space. One said that day will "not be far off."

Western scientists saw it as proof the Russians are working desperately to beat the United States into space and said there was a chance the Russians might succeed this year.

They based their predictions on the fact the Soviet already has two major space "firsts" — the first satellite and the first missile

Talks Fail To Make Progress As Steel Showdown Date Nears

NEW YORK (UPI) — Neither union nor company bargaining teams showed signs of relenting today in negotiations aimed at heading off a nationwide steel strike next Tuesday midnight.

Stepped-up negotiations were resumed Monday when four-man bargaining teams representing the United Steelworkers of America and the nation's 12 largest steel companies conducted morning and afternoon sessions. No progress was reported.

Similar sessions were scheduled for today.

A mystery developed Monday when David J. McLaughlin, president of the Steelworkers Union, failed to appear at the afternoon bargaining session. The reason for his absence was not announced.

Although the strike deadline is barely a week away, a showdown must come by Sunday, when the steel companies would — if faced by an imminent walkout — begin banking furnaces in anticipation of a shutdown.

Negotiations are being conducted under terms of a two-week truce arranged by President Eisenhower on the eve of a previous strike deadline. If negotiations continue deadlocked, it is regarded as possible that the union would be asked to agree to a further contract extension.

The American Iron and Steel Institute reported Monday that summer vacations and a series of wildcat strikes cut the nation's steel production last week to the lowest level in five months. Output totaled 2,215,000 tons, more than 250,000 tons less than the preceding week.

Meanwhile, the union, in a bulletin to its locals throughout the nation, said the steel companies would have "even more embarrassing riches" to explain when their second quarter earnings are announced later this month. The bulletin said the industry's profits would "top anything ever seen in history."

The steel industry, in refusing to accede to the union's demands, has urged the USW to accept a one-year wage freeze in order to avert more inflation.

Tear Gas Halts Prison Riot As Officers Trick Convicts

Official Tells Of Riot End

By DAVE BAKER As Told To UPI

MONROE, Wash. (UPI) — The whole thing took only two tear gas cartridges and two minutes. Superintendent Ernest Timpani and Larry Delmore, the correctional superintendent from Olympia, spent about an hour working out the details of the capture plan. And the plan went off without a hitch.

The first step was to send our correctional Lt. William McKelvey to the door to talk to the ringleaders, inmates Richard Murray and Robert J. Jamin. They were the two with the knives, and the superintendent figured if he got them first, the whole problem would be over.

McKelvey went to the window of the door to the visitors room where all the hostages were. The window had been smashed, and it was easy to talk to the men in there.

McKelvey got Murray and Jamin to come to the window. Then he told them that Dr. Heyns (Dr. Garrett Heyns, state institutions director) was here from Olympia to talk to them.

"Olympia was the code word in the capture plan. As soon as McKelvey said, "Olympia," correctional Officer John Martin was to step from a hiding place against the wall near the door and let fly with a tear gas burst.

Martin fired a perfect shot, hitting both Murray and Jamin in the face. He used a gun meant for long range, but in this case it was used at short range on purpose to put them out of commission for sure.

One cartridge did the job. Then McKelvey reached in through the broken glass and opened the door. Three big correctional officers, each weighing about 250 pounds and well trained in tear gas work, then rushed in. They were picked especially because of their huskiness. They wore gas masks. The three were Lt. Donald McDicken, Sgt. Robert Peterson and Officer Ernest Jaasen.

About 10 custodial staff members were right behind them. Timpani was in command in the area. But he didn't go in. It would have been poor strategy for him to go in there.

Murray came out first, voluntarily. He was completely disabled by the gas. But Jamin ran back after the shot of gas and ducked into a closet in the room. They had to open the closet and hit him with another shot.

VERY TALENTED MONEY MAKER
LONDON (UPI) — Artist Derek Forbes, 25, was refused bail Monday because the court was afraid he'd go out and make money. Forbes was arrested for counterfeiting. "I have seen the one pound notes," said Magistrate Seymour Collins. "They are so expert that I cannot agree to grant bail."

WOMEN, CHILDREN SAFE AFTER 13-HOUR ORDEAL

MONROE, WASH. (UPI) — Two ticklish minutes punctuated with tear gas today ended a fantastic escape plot by four convicts and freed 38 hostages they had threatened to mutilate or murder.

After nearly 14 hour of swaggering arrogance in the visitors room at the State Reformatory here, the rebels were back behind bars. And 24 civilian visitors, including 18 women and children walked to safety.

A well-placed pair of tear gas cartridges did the job after a bit of trickery conspired by Dr. Garrett Heyns, director of state institutions, and Reformatory Superintendent Ernest Timpani, set up the play.

Timpani announced shortly before 4 a.m. p.m. that the convicts had sent out word that "they're going to start throwing out bodies at six o'clock."

"We're going in after them at four o'clock."

The four convicts were baited to the window in the visitors' room door with the announcement Heyns, who was actually at the state capitol in Olympia, wanted to talk to them.

"As soon as they came to the window, a guard let them have it with tear gas. There was no one hurt."

Two of the guards being held hostage, Lt. Rudolph B. Maley and Joseph Harris, grabbed two of the rebel convicts as the gas exploded and wrestled them to the floor. It was all over seconds later as more officers stormed into the room.

The convicts had two butcher knives and two meat forks for weapons. They never had a chance to use them.

The women, eyes streaked with tears from effects of the gas, walked out of the room, most of them carrying children. The guards followed. Hugh J. DeWalt, 38, was nearly overcome and had to be assisted by Harris and Maley.

Revived a short time later, Guard DeWalt said he wasn't sure "we had only two hours to live."

Mrs. Virgil Turner, 24, held her 5-month-old baby, Elaine, tightly to her bosom.

Hostages Speechless
"It wasn't bad at all," she said. "None of them acted real fierce."

The convicts had demanded they be given an escape car in which they planned to drive to Canada. They said they would take four hostages.

Timpani rejected three ultimatums, the third with the surprise tear gas attack.

The quickness with which the ordeal ended left the hostages exceedingly numb. As they filed downstairs to the main lobby of the administration building, there was

Committee Sets Test For Hoffa

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Rackets Committee set up a comparison test today to determine whether Teamster President James R. Hoffa has gotten more credit than he deserved for his union's contracts with management.

Committee Counsel Robert F. Kennedy said witnesses would include Ted Daly, anti-Hoffa head of Teamster Local 445 in Westchester, N.Y., and other Teamster officials from Baltimore, Pittsburgh and New York.

In addition, Kennedy said, testimony would be heard from management spokesmen including Joseph Adellizzi, head of the Empire State Trucking Assn., and a representative of the nationally operated Anchor Motor Freight Co.

"We want to see if the high contracts for which Mr. Hoffa is given credit in the Central Conference of Teamsters are his," Kennedy said. "And whether they compare with contracts in other areas."

Kennedy said that if possible, the committee also would call Michael Communale, assistant prosecutor in Hudson County, N.J., who reported himself ill Monday.

Walter A. Dorn, president of the Dorn Transportation Co., testified that he paid $14,000 in legal fees to Communale in accord with a suggestion by Anthony (Tony Pro) Provenzano, president of Teamster Local 560 in Hoboken, N.J.

Dorn said he never used Communale's legal talents and had never even seen or talked to the attorney. He said he paid the money as a $200 a month retainer in order to avoid labor strife at his company's Secaucus, N.J., terminal.

Lyle Flick and Larry Ingelert were in the plane at the time of the mishap.

Improvements Are Made For Elgin Stampede
Improvements are being completed as the time draws near for the 1959 Elgin Stampede.

Stampedeers have built new cement block rest rooms adjacent to the arena.

The track circling the arena has been widened and rebuilt. They have also built a new guard rail on the inside of the track and worked on some new fence.

All the work was done by donation and the Stampedeers paid for the materials.

It is estimated that the cost of the project will involve between $2,000 to $2500.

The coronation ball, announcing the new queen of the Stampede, will be held in Elgin July 18, at the Stampede's Hall.

At that time one of the four candidates will begin her rule. The candidates for queen are Wanda Schaubert, La Grande; Ella Mae Denton, Union; Celia Cooclaure, Elgin; and Jodyce Tameris, Elgin.
