SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Terror stalks San Antonio after dark.

Police threw more manpower today into the search for a mysterious marksman who shot and seriously wounded his seventh victim Friday night. They said it may be the work of a madman.

Rudy Casas, 16, crumpled to the sidewalk with a bullet in his side. It was fired from a passing car. He was able to tell police before an ambulance arrived that he heard a shot as a darkened sedan raced past him, then felt a pain in his right side.

Casas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Casas, is the mysterious gunman's second victim who is in serious condition. The other five escape with minor wounds.

The shootings have been going on for three weeks.

Most have been on city streets with a .22 caliber pistol or rifle. But in one instance, a deputy sheriff narrowly escaped death when a shotgun blast shattered a picture window while he sat in his living room.

Police said the gunman may be a good marksman who deliberately avoids killing his targets.

THE GIRLS WERE ROBBED

Congressmen Modestly Admit They Won The Spelling Tilt

By FRANK ELEAZER
UPI Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three congressmen met three school girls in a spelling match and modestly admitted afterwards that the school girls had lost.

This is to file a minority report. The girls were robbed.

The eighth-graders flew in from California to take on the lawmakers after clobbering directors of the Santa Rosa Chamber of Commerce. The directors reportedly had made the mistake of complaining that kids these days are not learning to spell like they used to.

This proved to be true, and thank goodness for that. Those businessmen apparently couldn't spell fire sale.

To ease their embarrassment, they sic'ed their victors on Congress. They figured no doubt that with the kind of gobbledygook they talk around here the lawmakers had forgotten all they ever knew about English.

Rep. Clement Miller (D-Calif.) was their first choice as a legislative sacrifice to the girl spelling champs. The girls got their start by winning a three-county bee conducted by the Santa Rosa Press Democrat in Miller's congressional district. Miller couldn't very well say no. Anyway, yes is one word every congressman learns to spell right away.

Found Some Experts

Miller looked around for support and came up with a couple of obvious experts, Reps. Jeffery Cohelan (D-Calif.), a former Fulbright scholar at Oxford, and Ken Hechler (D-W.Va.), a Ph.D., and former college professor who helped write speeches for Adlai E. Stevenson.

The girls arrived for the contest unshaken and early. Miller was there, too, but his two experts were nowhere to be seen. They hurried in minutes late, and the word was they had been studying.

From the outcome, it would be hard to say what.

The photographers got things moving by asking the girls where they were from, and to spell it. Mary McFarling, 14, said her home is Ukiah. Carolyn Storts, 14, said she comes from Gualala. Valerie Turner, 13, gave her town as Petaluma.

The congressmen saw right then, I guess, that these girls would be hard to beat.

The rules were read, and the trouble began.

Majority Would Rule

Cohelan said on the panel shows he watches the contestants get time to confer. Anyway, he said all decisions would be by majority vote.

The photos said please run through some warmups while they shot the pictures. Somebody offered the word Butler, as in Paul, which Miller promptly spelled "botch," in an obvious effort to get the teenagers confused.

Then they got down to the contest.

Mary handled slavery, bachelor, grotesque, and chandelier without even trying. Valerie ran through scarce, committee, involuntary, and embroidery. Carolyn got breakfast, discrepancy, genesis, and laboratory, with no more than a sigh.

Miller got safely through romance. He staggered on aggravate; but got it right on the second try, in clear violation of rule 5, which said once is enough. He managed gullible and moccasin.

Licked On Mayonnaise

Cohelan handled bicycle and crescent but was licked on mayonnaise. He tried that one twice without getting close.

Hechler eased through available, geranium, abdomen, and fallacious.

On seismograph Carolyn rolled her eyes to the sky, tried C for a starter, and was ruled out under rule 5.

Miller collapsed under tonsillectomy. Valerie went down under tercentenary. Mary drew fictitious which she spelled like that.

She was the only one in the room who seemed shocked when the judges said she was wrong. The official list, it was noted, spelled it fictitious.

So Hechler was proclaimed winner. The girls left mildly crestfallen. And George Coffey, the UPI West Coast reporter, raced off to file the results to Ukiah, Gualala and Petaluma. When George was half-way through writing his copy, Richard Hallett, the UPI teletype operator, got the part about Mary losing out on fictitious.

"She spelled it right," Hallett called the Library of Congress for a ruling. The experts there consulted their dictionaries, then wisely declined to arbitrate a contest between school girls and congressmen.

What they did say though was that Hallett was clearly the winner.

Marines To Learn Ups And Downs

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (UPI) — Two hundred and fifty toughened Marines set out today on a 14-day, 175-mile march that will take them from the lowest to the highest point in the continental United States—Death Valley to Mt. Whitney.

The Marines, members of the crack 1st Reconnaissance Battalion, will pass from 130-degree temperatures at 232 feet below sea level to the freezing heights of 14,960-foot peak.

Marine Corps officers said the march, called "Operation Lo-Hi," would utilize only the best physical specimens of the corps.

One officer said the purpose was to:

—Acclimatize men to desert heat and humidity.

—Train them to recognize and prevent heat and high-altitude casualties.

—Develop unit discipline, teamwork, morale, health, strength and endurance.

Former Boxer KO's Fleeing Bank Thief

NEW YORK (UPI) — A suspect fleeing a bank robbery had the misfortune of running smack into a former boxer Friday.

One well-timed—and well-placed—left hook to the jaw ended the flight and resulted in the arrest of Alvin Schneidman, 24, an unemployed clerk.

The former boxer, Don Stiebel, 44, a business agent for the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, said he was strolling in midtown Manhattan when he saw Schneidman being pursued by a bank guard and scores of pedestrians, some of them shouting "Stop, thief."

As Schneidman approached, Stiebel uncorked a punch which caught the suspect flush on the jaw.

Police said Schneidman, using a threatening note, had obtained 2.0 Policesaid Schneidman, using a threatening note, had obtained $2,000 from a teller in the Trade Bank and Trust Co.

She was the only one in the
