

JACKIE L. HOPKINS Sworn Into The Navy

Jackie Lee Hopkins Joins U. S. Navy

Jackie Lee Hopkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin R. Hopkins of 1845 Y avenue, La Grande, was sworn into the U.S. Navy, at Portland, June 29, 1959, in the rating of Seaman Recruit.

High school attended La Grande High School and was graduated in June, 1959. He made application for enlistment at the La Grande Recruiting Station and was processed for enlistment by Frank Williams, ENC, USN, Navy Recruiter.

Shortly after receiving the oath Hopkins left Portland for San Diego, Calif., where he will undergo basic training for approximately 10 weeks.

They Wear Next To Nothing When Visiting Law Factory

By FRANK ELEAZER UPI Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Senate secretary with a number of years service behind her was stopped the other day by a Capitol guide with the suggestion she might profit by taking the official tour of the building.

"I can't do it today," she hedged, without denying his premise. "I don't have on my halter and shorts."

Officials say it isn't actually mandatory that tourists wear next to nothing when they visit our law factory here. On the other hand it has become obvious in the recent past that they aren't required to wear anything much more than that either.

Several summers ago House members got so distracted by what the visiting ladies weren't wearing that a rule was imposed banning shorts in the galleries except where worn by girls under 10.

There is no evidence that attendance fell off among the House members. However, it was ascertained within a few days that dozens of the rejected visitors not only were over 10 but over 21, and were registered voters in some congressional district. So that rule was repealed.

Now, the rule for visitors in both House and Senate galleries is come as you are. And several lawmakers have been heard lately to comment on the number of women who appear to have received this message while out taking the sun.

Male and female, the taxpayers are visiting the Capitol again this summer in droves. And more than one jostled statesman has been moved to observe, as he beat his way through the corridors, that some of them acted as if they owned the place.

"Where are all the members of Congress?" They usually want to know after finding only a dozen of the House' 436 members, or three of the Senate's 96, on the House and Senate floors. The answer is, they are in the offices answering letters from home, and attending to other such priority chores.

"Where is the President?" is another, all-time favorite inquiry, a sad commentary on what they must be teaching in the civics classes back home. This one is so standard, in fact that the guides now try to head it off by an early announcement that the President lives and works at another local tourist attraction, called the White House.

The Capitol tour takes 35 minutes and I don't know anywhere else you can pick up so much history for 25 cents. There is also the chance you will bump into somebody whose name you can mention on the postcards you write to your friends.

One presumed student of the current political scene, aged about 10, was spotted recently hanging around the entrance to an elevator marked "senators only."

After the passage of enough orators and presidential prospects to satisfy the most ardent celebrity hunter, somebody finally asked this visitor what he had on his mind.

"I'm waiting to see Harmon Killebrew," he is said to have answered.

Important Points On Hospitalization

DENVER (UPI)—The National Jewish Hospital says the three most important points to remember when preparing a child for his first hospitalization are: —Tell him why he is going to the hospital as simply as possible. What a child knows he is less likely to fear.

—Do not tell him you will be right back if the hospital's rules do not allow it. Tell him exactly when you will come to see him.

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann: What's wrong with some young mothers that they turn pre-school youngsters out of the house in the morning and don't bother about them after that?

I live in a neighborhood loaded with youngsters. They dig in the dirt (no tulips for me this year) and get into mischief in people's garages. But the worst part of this lack of supervision is that they wander out into the street and the traffic is heavy.

Yesterday I heard a screeching of brakes and could almost smell the rubber tires burning. I ran outside and the driver had stopped within inches of hitting two little sisters. The driver was in a cold sweat and explained he didn't see the kids—they "came out of nowhere." What do you suggest?—Beth.

Dear Beth: If you didn't take the driver and describe the incident you should have. Only when some of these thoughtless mothers realize how close their children come to tragedy will they wake up.

Dear Ann: Have teenage girls taken leave of their senses or what? Last night our 17-year-old went to a dance. I bought her a lovely pink gown. We hiked all over town to get just the right slippers. Then we had them tinted to match the dress. Someone took candid camera shots at the dance and when our daughter showed them to us we almost fainted. There she was—dancing in her stocking feet! When I asked if she'd lost her mind she said "It's much more comfy and besides some of the fellows are shorter than the girls."

If this is the way they do, why bother about buying shoes at all? What would YOU do if you had a teenage daughter who danced in her stocking feet?—Old Fogie.

Dear Old Fogie: I have—and she does. I do the same thing you did. Nothing.

Incidentally what's so bad about it? It's a fact—and the short fellows love it. No harm

Martha's Memos

Don't Demand; Ask With A Smile

by Martha Morgan

"It's all in the way you ask," Father explained to Mary's twins the other day when they were staying with us. "When you ask in a nice way, there's nothing I'd rather do than please you. But when you demand, I feel like saying 'No.'"

And then he repeated a bit of rhyme I haven't heard since Mary was a crite: "No matter what you'd have me do I'd do it all and twice for you. For when you ask me, all the while You ask with such a lovely smile!"

Father himself has developed well this art of asking. He's so persuasive in his gentle requests that I always feel it a privilege to comply. Last night, for instance, he remarked casually, "Martha, I'm hungry for that good summer salad you make—you know, the gelatin one with the crunchy raw vegetables. The double rich Morning Milk adds extra nourishment so necessary in hot weather when appetites lag. This afternoon I think I'll fry some chicken and make hot biscuits, for they are also favorites of Father's."

Who could resist? So this morning while it was still cool, I mixed up the salad and put it into the refrigerator to set. It's little wonder Father enjoys this salad, for the lime-flavored gelatin combined with mayonnaise and smooth rich Morning Milk combines delightfully with all the crunchy raw vegetables. The double rich Morning Milk adds extra nourishment so necessary in hot weather when appetites lag. This afternoon I think I'll fry some chicken and make hot biscuits, for they are also favorites of Father's.

SUMMER SALAD MOLD

- (Makes 6 servings)
- 1 package (3 ounces) lime-flavored gelatin
- 1 cup hot water
- 1 cup mayonnaise
- 1 cup undiluted MORNING MILK
- 1/2 cup lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon horseradish
- 1 cup grated raw carrots
- 1/2 cup chopped celery
- 1/2 cup sliced radishes
- 1/2 cup chopped green pepper
- 1/2 cup chopped cucumber

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Cool until consistency of unbeaten egg white. Slowly add mayonnaise, Morning Milk, lemon juice, salt and horseradish. Stir until well blended. Fold in remaining ingredients. Mix well. Spoon into 1 1/2 quart mold. Chill in refrigerator until firm (about 2 hours). Unmold. Serve on salad greens.

Learning how to ask is one of the great arts of living. I believe. For a person could have almost anything he wanted, if he went about it the right way. It's strange how our reactions to requests are based nearly always—not on what is asked of us—but upon the manner in which it's done.

Local Three Links Club Holds Annual Picnic At Riverside

The Three Links Club of Crystal Rebekah lodge held their annual picnic at Riverside park recently. There were 30 members and one guest. Mrs. Grace Ewing, who is visiting here in the home of her sister, Mrs. Forrest Sherman. She is from Salt Lake City.

Those attending were seated at flower decorated tables in the park pavilion.

Helen Frizzell, president, presided over the short business meeting. Ideas for money making projects for the fall bazaars were discussed. Many new ideas were given.

The apron to be used as "Patches for Funds" was shown to the members and plans made to start sewing the money patches on.

Many reports of sickness were given. Crystal Lodge's Noble Grand, Lucille Courtney was reported ill with a throat infection and Mrs. Adah McCrary is still confined to the hospital.

Members were urged to bring any ideas for the bazaar items to the meeting on Aug. 12. They will be discussed and work outlined.

Committees for the Aug. 12 meeting will include kitchen—Mary Aas, Pearl Swan, Elva Wilhelm, Ila Dial and Lillian Ebert; entertainment—Maude Holman, Adele Wiegand and Jessie Mitchell.
