King-Size Headache Builds Up For U.S. In Caribbean

By PHIL NEWSON

UPI Foreign Editor

While the U. S. secretary of state is tied up with the Russians at Geneva, a king-size headache for the United States continues to build up in the Caribbean.

Since the beginning of the year, a half dozen of the 21 American republics have been the targets of uprising, usually fostered by political exiles whose model and, by all the evidence, sometimes mentor is Cuba's Fidel Castro.

Latest to be hit, for the second time in a month, was Honduras. At the same time, newsmen in Port-Au-Prince, Haiti, and Ciudad Trujillo in the Dominican Republic were standing by for other threatened outbreaks.

Others already had occurred or were threatened in Guatemala, Nicaragua, and Panama.

lowed to filter into the Cuban armed forces. He subsequently was labeled a traitor by Castro.

Castro said the United States should be brought before the Organization of American states on charges of interfering with Cuba's foreign affairs.

Hits Sensitive Nerve

He hit a sensitive nerve for Latin Americans traditionally suspicious of the "colossus of the north."

Diaz Lanz's charges of communism in Cuba were not the first such to be brought up against the Castro regime, and there have been other evidences of increased Communist infiltration throughout the Caribbean area. A notable example has been the return to Guatemala of many former adherents of the Red-tinged regime of Jacobo Arbenz.

Fight Uphill Battle

Outside the Caribbean, President Arturo Frondizi of Argentina fought his uphill way against opponents, at least some of whom were in the pay of exiled Argentine dictator Juan D. Peron. Abortive attempts had been made against the government of Paraguay.

An unhappy witness has been the United States with a primary interest in preserving Caribbean peace but fettered by both old and new dangers.

Castro played upon one of them with a blast against the U.S. for granting political asylum to former Cuban air force commander Pedro Luis Diaz Lanz. Diaz Lanz quit the air force after charging that Communists were being al-

Smoke Signals Will Beckon To Encampment

PENDLETON (UPI)—The National Indian Encampment that opens here Saturday will beckon visitors with smoke signals, but the old fire and blanket system has been ruled out.

Centennial officials said the smoke signals will be produced with World War II-type smoke grenades. The signals will begin Friday.

A Centennial spokesman said the grenades are less likely to touch off a forest fire. And they also make denser smoke—better seen from a greater distance.

TOSS-UP OVER WHO WILL PLAY FDR IN NEW MOVIE

By VERNON SCOTT

UPI Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Who will portray Franklin D. Roosevelt in the screen version of "Sunrise at Campobello"? Ralph Bellamy or Charlton Heston?

Right now it's a toss-up. Producer Dore Schary whose spectacular Broadway success played 555 performances, says the decision is up to Bellamy.

"Ralph hasn't told me whether he wants to play the role on the screen," Schary said. "He thinks he may be too old for the movie version, but I think Ralph would be just as effective as he is on the stage.

"If he wants the part it's his. However, in the play Roosevelt is depicted between the ages of 39 and 41, and Ralph is 54."

Plays Historical Figures

Heston, on the other hand is in his mid-30s, and accustomed to playing historical figures.

In his brief but rampaging career Chuck has played Moses, Andrew Jackson and now Ben Hur. Schary has contacted the big guy for the "Campobello" picture and Heston is enthusiastic.

"Charlton would make a fine Roosevelt," Schary said.

"We won't go into production until next March, so there is ample time to think about casting the role. If neither Ralph nor Charlton are able to do it, I have a couple of other actors in mind.

L'se Hyde Park

"We'll shoot the bulk of the picture in Hollywood with locations at Campobello and Hyde Park, the old Roosevelt home. It is now a national shrine, but I think the Department of Interior will give us permission to use the old house for actual interior scenes."

Schary went on to say that Eleanor Roosevelt helped tremendously with details and background material while he was writing the play.

"Sunrise at Campobello" was a great hit with everybody because of the wonderful emotional response it elicited from every audience. I even received congratulations from the toughest of Republicans.

"The story is not essentially political. It relates an era in the life of a warm human being who overcomes a dreadful handicap—polio.
