Freeze recommended fruit and vegetable varieties, and you'll have better meals next winter, say food technologists at Oregon State College.

Last year, OSC tested more than 300 varieties of fruits and vegetables to learn how they stand up under processing. Not all varieties freeze well. Some get tough, lose flavor, color and texture, and others tend to develop undesirable flavors.

Apricots — Royal, Blenheim Tilton, Wenatchee, Moorpark. Blueberries and Huckleberries — Native Wild Blue and Red Concord, Jersey, Dixi, Stanley, Blue Crop, Bluejay, Earlblue.

Cherries, sweet — Lambert, Bing, Deacon, Royal Ann, Republican, Van, Sam. Figs — Mission, Kadota, Gillette, Granata, Lattarula, Black Spanish.

Grapes — Thompson Seedless, Worden, Campbell's Early, Concord. Peaches — Elberta, Halehaven, Veteran, Triagem, J. H. Hale, Redhaven, Dixigem, Fairhaven, Coronet.

Strawberries — Marshall, Corvallis, Northwest, Brightmore, Siletz, Puget Beauty. Beans, green or wax — Blue Lake strains, Tendergreen, Stringless Green Pod, Wade, Processor, Columbia, Kentucky Wonder, Puregold Wax.

Beets — Detroit Dark Red, Early Model. Corn, cut or on-the-cob — Canequeen, Seneca Golden, Tendermost, Prosperity, Golden Cross Bantam. Many other popular varieties freeze with good results.

Squash summer — Zucchini, Summer Crookneck.

Jacket Makes Largest Change In Woman's Fall Wardrobe

By GAY PAULEY UPI Staff Writer

NEW YORK (UPI)—The longer jacket is the largest change in the basic of a woman's fall wardrobe — the suit.

But the new length, to the wrist and even longer when the arm is down, may not be for you, warns one of Seventh Avenue's top suit designers.

"Some women just can't wear the long jacket," said Ben Zuckerman, twice winner of the American Fashion Critic's award. "It is not becoming to a short, rather plump woman."

Zuckerman, like most of the garment center's suit makers, leans toward the longer jackets throughout his collection. But he also makes 'em for the short figure—jackets shaped slightly and coming only to the natural waistline.

But the best looking suits—at least on the statuesque models—are the tunics. These have straight skirts, with jackets ranging in length from wrist bone to that of a 3/4-length coat. Zuckerman showed them with crushed leather belts three and four inches wide. But unlabeled, they are just as natty—he has used tucks and other tailoring detail to shape the tunics to the waistline and upper hip bone.

to show off a fur-piece or a bright scarf.

Zuckerman also copies the man's cutaway jacket, showing it topping a straight skirt or one with enough tucking at the waistline for an oval shape.

The designer is a member of the New York couture group, showing fall collections to visiting reporters this week.

A new shoulder treatment for coats, suits and daytime costumes is Zuckerman's "epaulette," a flat fold of fabric cut with the yoke and jutting out about an inch over the area where the sleeve is sewn in.

Long Jacket Stressed

Two other suit firms—Paul Parnes and George Carmel—stress the long jacket. Carmel jackets reach the mid-thigh with the bodice moulded to the figure. Skirts are almost all straight. Parnes belts many of the longer jackets in his collection.

ANN LANDERS Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann: My mother married a man nine years younger than she is when Dad died seven months ago. She didn't know him very well or very long. I'm sure it's a mistake, but this is her problem. I'm writing about mine.

My stepfather has a warped sense of humor that makes me sick. He thinks he's a comedian and does imitations of everybody. I'm 18 and going with an honor student who will enter college this fall on a full scholarship.

Ned had polio when he was a child and it left him with a slight limp. I don't think of him as handicapped, and neither does anyone else who knows him.

Last night some relatives were visiting and my stepfather did an imitation of Ned. He exaggerated the limp and reeled off some big words, making fun of his large vocabulary. I was so mad I bawled. Mother didn't say a word in fact she seemed amused. Later when I complained she said I was a bum sport.

Dear Ruthie: Bum sport, my eye! Your stepfather is either sadistic or he's a case of arrested development. Anyone who ridicules a physical defect has a personality problem of his own which is a thousand times worse. It's your stepfather who is handicapped—not Ned.

Dear Ann: I've lived in this town for 25 years and of course I have lots of connections. In the past few years some new people have moved into our social circle.

Lounging in a bath of cold water during warm days won't give the relief most people expect it to. More lasting relief comes from a warm bath. Warm water draws heat from the body because it dilates blood vessels. In this way the heat reaches the surface and escapes through the skin.

and, because I wanted to be a good neighbor and friend, I gave them the names of a fine yardman, a seamstress, cleaning woman, sitters and so on.

Now I can't get these services when I need them because the new friends have these people all booked up. Furthermore, they've spoiled my workers by paying them more than I did. Is this fair? What can I do about it? — Big Hearted Fool.

Dear Fool: There is nothing you can do except call for enough in advance so they are not booked and meet the going price. You can't lock people in a dungeon to make sure no one else gets them, you know.

To learn how to keep your boy friend in line without losing him, send for Ann Landers' new booklet, "Necking and Petting—And How Far To Go," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a large, self addressed, stamped envelope.

(Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self addressed envelope.)

Martha's Memos One's Own Soul Must Direct His Actions

by Martha Morgan

"Sometimes I think it has taken all my life to learn that when I have a problem, I must look to myself for the answer."

and not to the people around me," I said to Julie Jackson this morning. She had come over to borrow a can of Morning Milk for the baby's formula, but she stayed to ask my advice about a problem that's bothering her.

I could have told her what I thought she should do, but that wasn't enough. She had to search her own soul for the answer, and then she would be ready to act with conviction.

For instance, I told her, another person cannot tell me how to discipline my children. Using the rod may be right for him. But were I to do the same, it would betray my inner self which says I must teach through gentle persuasion. If we are both true to what we really believe, our children will be reared in earnest love and the end results, I think, will be the same.

And so Julie talked her problem out, using me as her sounding board, and by the time she left had arrived at her own course of action.

I happened to have a tray of peppermint stick ice cream in the freezer which I sent with her for the children's lunch. This is her favorite kind of dessert for them, she said. Not only does it satisfy their sweet tooth, but double rich Morning Milk makes it so nourishing, she's happy for them to eat their fill. As she headed home with a can of Morning Milk in one hand, a tray of peppermint stick ice
