ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann: We married during the depression. Times were hard and we saved every penny. Then came the war. My husband's business boomed. All our friends built nice homes. We built a modest one. Tom kept saying we must save for the boys' education. Although we were well set, I continued to do all my own housework and laundry. I even made my own clothes.

Today one boy is through college and married. The other boy has one more year left. My husband still refuses to build a nice home, or even remodel this one. He says he wants to leave the boys well fixed when he's gone. How much do we owe the kids anyway? I want a nice home and think I've earned it. Do you think it's wrong to want a little comfort in life before I'm too old to enjoy it? Please give me some advice.—Impatient.

Dear Impatient: I pity your poor husband. He's clenched that fist so hard for so long he can't relax and enjoy the fruits of his labors. Financial caution is a virtue but some people pinch the penny beyond the time when it makes sense. It's wrong of a husband to deny his wife the pleasures of life when she has earned them. Now that he can afford nice things, saving it for his sons is foolishness.

The best legacy a father can leave his children is the ability to take care of themselves. Tell him if statistics mean anything, women live longer than men. Ask how he'd like you to enjoy a new house with your second husband. I hope this jars him loose. Good luck.

Indirect Approach To Cleanliness

Sometimes ingenuity will accomplish benefits which nagging can't. One clever mother, who never could get her child to wash her hands before leaving the bathroom, succeeded by using an amusing cartoon as a reminder.

Mother mounted a pixy picture, printed this question beneath it: Sweetheart—did you forget? and fastened it over the wash basin. In no time, the youngster entered into the spirit of the game and the "dirty-hands-dead-lock" was broken.

The African Gray Parrot is known to survive as long as 80 years in captivity.

Booth in the lobby of the Sacajawea Hotel and continue at the picnic for those who are unable to attend the banquet. All local persons are urged to register as early in the day as possible.
