Beleaguered Husbands Reply To Old Feminine Queries

Some of my men readers are reacting to a recent column which asked questions women don't seem able to answer. Questions like: "Why, when Mama is currying around getting ready or guests, does Papa always decide he has to clean his guns or straighten out his fishing tackle box?"

Well, ladies, here's why—according to the men.

Mormons Will Break Ground For Modern Chapel In London

Erection of a contemporary Mormon church will begin Monday in an historic cultural and residential area of London, England with groundbreaking ceremonies under direction of a high-ranking church leader from Utah.

The Central London Chapel of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latterday Saints (Mormon) will raise a spire-topped tower among the staid apartments and museums of Exhibition Road, South Kensington.

Elder Marion G. Romney, a member of the Council of Twelve Apostles, will officiate at the Aug. 3 program, along with Sir Thomas P. Bennett, the structure's distinguished British architect.

The ceremonies will come during a conference of the North London, South London and North Districts of the British Mission, and during a British August Bank Holiday.

T. Bowring Woodbury, prominent Wichita, Kansas, businessman who is serving as British Mission president, will conduct the program.

A novel main floor plan includes a chapel, and an adjoining cultural hall which can be combined to seat 900. A baptismal pool is also provided. Office space and conference rooms are on a mezzanine.

Two stories of classrooms, 10 on each floor, are reached by elevators installed in the tower.

Included in the basement is parking space for two dozen automobiles. Total floor area of the four stories is 35,000 square feet. Completion is planned for 1961.

The building is one of more than 75 chapels the Church owns throughout the British Isles, but will be the most elaborate and costly. It is with-in a block of the British Mission Headquarters.

Nearby are the Museums of Industry, Geology, Science, Natural History, Victoria and Albert Museum, Royal Albert Hall, and buildings of the University of London. Two famous parks, Hyde Park and Kensington Park, are within walking distance. An underground railway terminal is across the street.

Multi-purpose use of the structure includes, in addition to regular worship services, musical, speech, and dramatic events, and social and even basketball and other athletic events. These functions are needed to accommodate the highly developed program of the Church.

An organ, with its pipes artistically exposed, will be constructed in the chapel. Acoustics will provide for perfect hearing of talks or musical programs.

A quiet room, insulated by soundproof windows, overlooks the chapel from the mezzanine, a boon for parents with noisy youngsters. A public address system is provided.

If you're keeping some of your summer shoes over for wear next year, see that they're in good shape before you put them away. Have your shoe repairman go over them carefully. Then wrap them in white tissue paper and store them in boxes.

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I've been seeing a married man for 18 months. I love him and he loves me. Someone told his wife and she phoned me. I denied everything. That same evening my sweetheart came to see me. He said I had persuaded her completely and she thinks the gossip was just a vicious rumor.

That night I told him if he wanted to stay with his wife he'd have to leave me strictly alone. He swore he didn't love her, but claimed he couldn't leave his kids. I said "O.K. that settles it. Now get lost and don't ever call me again."

This past week he phoned five times. I've slammed down the receiver, but he called back. He says he loves me and is going crazy. I love him too but I know now it's hopeless. A terrible struggle is going on inside me and I can't afford to lose the battle. What can I do?—Fighting It.

Dear Fighting: Same tired plot—just different players. Married man, no intention of leaving his family, fiddling around, but hates to get out of the orchestra. The next time he calls, tell him if he phones you again you'll pay his wife a visit and ask her what to do. This is a mighty strong threat but since you're fighting hard to build a new life and he insists on making it rough, use the heaviest ammunition available. And keep your word if he bothers you again.

Dear Ann: You said the readers were against you 50 to 1 on the ducktail haircut for teenage boys. Well, make it 50 to 2. I'm on your side.

The fresh punk who bragged about getting six haircuts a year and considers himself "a perfect gentleman" betrayed himself when he made such rude comments as "your eyeballs need cleaning, Annie" and "Old umpires need glasses." He also made the smart alec remark that "a corny high school principal isn't an authority on hair because most high school principals haven't any."

From his letter it's apparent he's a sassy, impudent, hood whose personality matches his haircut.—Casual Observer.

Dear Ann: There's a difference of opinion on how this problem should be handled.

My cousin insists on bringing her 9-year-old daughter to all grown up functions—hotel dinners, weddings, showers, parties of all kinds. The girl butts into conversations and takes right over. Many adults resent it.

I hinted strongly to my cousin that a 9-year-old doesn't belong at these affairs and the reply was "I want her to learn to be a lady so I take her places where she can practice."

The child has no friends her age and is considered obnoxious by adults. What should be done?—C.M.N.

Dear C.M.N.: Of course this child doesn't belong at adult affairs and it's sad that she's dragged along. Furthermore it's unfair to the hostess and the guests. Since the mother hasn't sense enough to understand this, the women in the group when inviting her should tack on an extra sentence. Sample: "This party for adults. There won't be any children present for Hyacinth to visit with, so I hope you will not bring her along this time."

Nebraska Picnic Set At Portland

The annual Nebraska picnic will be held Aug. 9, at Janzen Beach Park, Portland. There is a program and prizes planned to follow the basket dinner.

Membership is necessary to participate in the special events, registration is free and important.

The social meetings are set for Aug. 22, Sept. 26, and Oct. 24, in the IOOF hall, 5130 S. E. 13th, Portland.

Dior Hoists Dress Hemlines In 'NEW New Look' For 1959

ieu Saint-Laurent's startling fashion layout for the coming fall and winter exposed a more generous portion of the leg than has been seen since the flapper days of the 1920s.

Saint-Laurent's sartorial bombshell made present styles as flat as champagne that has stood three days. His new styles were an audacious bid to boost the House of Dior's 15 million dollar a year sales.

Half of the hemlines Saint-Laurent showed for daytime wear and most of them for evening bared half the kneecap.

Some bared the entire kneecap; some nearly covered it.

A green-satin Dior evening dress called "metamorphosis" had a hip-bugging flounced skirt on its hemline so high that you saw the mannequin's kneecaps. Not since Saint-Laurent's great predecessor, the late Christian Dior, launched his almost ankle-length new look in 1947 has the House of Dior so rocked the fashion world.

Actress Audrey Hepburn, who caught the Coco Chanel show Wednesday, was at ringside. She said enthusiastically, "I'm all for short skirts—even to the kneecap if you've got the right legs."

Saint-Laurent left bust, waist and hips the way nature made them, concentrating all his attention at the top of the kneecap.

All eyes were on the daringly short skirts that were tiered, gathered or flounced with one thing in mind: To make women drastically shorten their skirts.

Saint-Laurent pulled out all the stops with his evening collection. Even evening skirts that were floor-length behind were slit up in front to almost kneecap level.

Emphasis On Skirts Sometimes the four-inch band that circled the top of the short hemline was only a foot in diameter.

The Dior skirt, which Saint-Laurent insisted was the secret of his new line, fell either straight from the waist or from the shoulders, or it belled out over underpinning at the hips.

But whether straight or bell-shaped, it always was flounced, tiered or gathered low on the hemline to dramatize the new length.

Suits in mohairs and plaids had natural shoulders and were worn with fur toque hats and large earrings.

Jackets were short, unlike all the other shows in Paris. Some were belted or loose-fitting.

The suit skirts ranged in hem-lengths from above to below the kneecap.
