ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: It's that time of year again and I need help. For years my husband has taken the family on a camping trip the last two weeks in August. We put up with it but I can't honestly say anyone enjoys these outings but him.

Last year I announced I was through cutting dishes, bedding and cooking utensils and washing clothes by hand in an old tub. I explained a person has to be cracked to leave a comfortable home and work like a truck horse and call it a "vacation."

I told him I want to rent a cabin with running water, inside facilities, refrigerator, and complete kitchen. He said "O.K. next year we'll do it that way."

Now he has started to talk tents again. The kids are fed up, too, and say they'd rather stay home if we can't get a cabin. What do you suggest?—Mrs. Hat It And Hate It.

Dear Had It and Hate It: Tell Nature Boy and the kids have been good sports for years and now it's his turn. Make it plain if he wants a family vacation he'll have to put up with running water, indoor plumbing and all the modern conveniences. If he refuses, tell him you'll be waiting at home with the mosquito lotion when he's finished tenting on the old camp ground.

Dear Ann: I'm one of those boobys who got married too young. I eloped at 17 against the advice of my parents. Three years later I found myself with two sons and a divorce.

My ex-husband remarried and took the boys because he said they'd be better off with him. I couldn't offer them anything so I agreed. Three weeks later he brought them back. His new wife didn't want them.

I was desperate. My parents offered to adopt them and it seemed the best way out. Now the boys are 3 and 5 years old and they are getting out of hand. They talk sassy to everyone and no one corrects them. When I try, my father says I should mind my own business because they are his children, not mine. What can I do? I am heartsick over this. —Foolish Mother.

Dear Foolish Mother: What a price to pay — and you may have to keep paying for years to come. When you permitted your parents to adopt the boys you forfeited your rights as a mother. Your only chance is to get

Black Family Holds Reunion

The home of Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Black in May Park was the scene Saturday and Sunday of a family reunion.

Those present for the two-day get-together were the couple's five sons and one daughter and their families. They are, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert N. Black of Lodge Grass, Mont., granddaughter Kathy accompanied them; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Black and children Joe, Donald and Margaret Ann of Quincy, Wash.; Mr. and Mrs. Berton E. Black and son Bradley and Mrs. Black's father, George Eitel, all of Salinas, Calif.; Mr. and Mrs. George W. Black and Janis and Ronald of Cheyenne, Wyo.; Mr. and Mrs. Donald E. Black and children Gregory, Jeffrey and Kimber Lynn of Granada Hills, Calif.; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Speiser and Gary, Marilyn and Raymond of Stayton.

Twelve of Mr. and Mrs. Black's 15 grandchildren were present, but their five great grandchildren could not attend.

This is the first time in 26 years that the family has been together at the same time.

Battle Of The Dress Hemline Continues In World Fashions

By PAT HERMAN
UPI Staff Writer
PARIS (UPI)—Dressmaker Guy La Roche unleashed a no holds barred campaign Friday against baring the kneecap—a move by the House of Dior that sent the fashion world into acrid debate on the length of skirts.

War Hero Runs Gas Station

BARRE, Mass. (UPI)—To see him now, manning the pumps at his filling station, you'd never think that Basil D. Izzi was once the central figure in a saga of the sea.

It happened in 1942, early in World War II, when Izzi, then a 19-year-old sailor, was set adrift along with four shipmates on a nine-by-eight-foot raft after their boat was torpedoes in the South Atlantic.

Izzi was one of three to survive the ordeal of 83 days aboard the raft, with only the fish and birds they could catch for food and only rainwater for drink.

call, thus falling into step with every other designer in the Paris fall showings except Yves Mathieu Saint-Laurent who became the sensation of the season by decreeing hobbie skirts and above-knee hemlines.

La Roche also went along with the others of the Paris pack by showing suits with long jackets. Some had fur-trimmed collars, one doubling as a hood. One hip-length jacket in lilac plaid had a button panel down the right side of the back to emphasize length. The models wore pale makeup, some of them hardly any lipstick, and wore high fur hats.

A debate on the Dior hemline raged through Europe and in the United States almost as violently as the debate over Christian Dior's "new look" of 1947—a style condemned by many and worn by all.

The Duchess of Windsor, perennially one of the world's 10 best-dressed women, was reported in favor of Dior's "1960 look" though she did moan, "How will I get in and out of taxicabs?"

If you were male and French the reaction was "excellent!" If you were female with pretty legs the reaction was coy but affirmative: "The short skirts are lovely—if you can afford to wear them."
