While diamonds may be called a girl's best friend, hand-knits are one of her best loves. Knitted garments of both the hand-knit and machine-knit variety are one of the special favorites of this year's fashions. Knitted garments and fabrics have a greater tendency to change shape during cleaning than woven ones. This is due largely to the fact that knitted materials can stretch in one direction and at the same time shrink in the other. Also, knitted clothes are likely to lose their shape during wear. For this reason they require frequent cleaning and blocking to restore them to their original shape and dimensions. This is true of fabrics and garments knitted of wool, cotton, rayon, nylon and combinations of yarns.

With knitted materials, as with all fabrics, your cleaner must analyze the yarn fibers to determine just which cleaning compound to use. Blocking and finishing of knitted clothes takes special skill, too. You can trust your knitted garments to us, and know that they are in capable, responsible hands... that they will be painstakingly handled during cleaning, blocking and finishing... and returned to you impeccably clean and new-looking.

Judging will be done Thursday morning, Aug. 27, as soon as possible after the entry books are closed at 10:30 a.m.

ANN LANDERS Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I'll bet you never got a letter like this in your life. It's not because I am the only teen-ager who feels this way but because not many kids would have the nerve to own up to these feelings.

Whenever I read a letter in your column I find a teen-ager who complains because her parents are too strict. I wish I could change places with her. My folks don't care what I do and it makes me miserable. The only question they ask is "Where did you go last night?" Sometimes I think they don't even listen to the answer. I could say "I went to Georgia and got married" and they wouldn't even raise an eyebrow.

I am 17 and have complete freedom to go and do as I please. My best girl friend who lives next door has a mother who makes her follow rules and regulations. I've adopted HER rules as my own. Sometimes this girl gripes because her Mom is too strict. I tell her she's lucky.

All teens, especially girls, need rules to follow and somebody to account to. Will you please print this letter? It may wake some kids up and also some parents.

—Orphan with living parents.

Dear Orphan: Thank you for your words of wisdom. You've got a mighty smart head on your 17-year-old shoulders. To you good counsel I can only add "Amen" and thank you for writing.

Dear Ann: Do you believe the wishes of a dying person should be respected? Four years ago my sister died of cancer. Before she passed away she told me if ever her husband wanted to remarry, to remind him that half of everything belongs to their oldest daughter, now 12 years old.

She made him promise that before a second marriage took place he would put half of all his worldly goods in a trust fund for the girl.

Recently my brother-in-law met a woman and three weeks later announced they were to be married. He's 45, but even so he can't possibly know in three weeks if this woman will be a good mother to my niece. What he does with his own life is none of my business, but I'm thinking of my sister's child. When I read his wife's letter I wish I could carry out the plan.

Since he knows nothing of this woman, it's possible that she will squander everything and my niece will be penniless. What can be done to protect her?

—Concerned Aunt

Dear Concerned: I'm not flattered and this problem is filled with legal fish-hooks and booby-traps. Also, the inheritance laws vary according to states. This I DO know, and it's true in all the 50 states (hello Alaska and Hawaii!)—no one can distribute an inheritance from the grave. If your sister had money of her own she should have put it in a trust fund for the daughter during her lifetime. This is much wiser than exacting an empty "death-bed" promise.
