County Girl Scouts Attend Forest Camp

Union County Girl Scouts returned Thursday morning from Troop Camping at Grande View forest camp on Mt. Emily. Eighteen girls were registered.

The girls set up camp by choosing their own campsites, building their own campfires, lashing washstands and setting up their sleep-overs. Each group planned their own menus and prepared them over their campfires.

Tuesday the girls hiked to Johnson Tower, learning from the ranger in charge how fires are spotted and various other duties of the forest ranger. They saw the view of the valley from the tower and took pictures. After all had visited the tower, the hike continued to the Viewpoint, where each girl ate the sack lunch she had prepared. After lunch they returned to the tower where some chose to climb again to the top and more pictures were taken. Then all returned to camp to rest before preparation for the evening meal.

Wednesday a group chose to hike with Mrs. Nicolson to Russel Spring. Those remaining in camp were kept busy preparing name tags with alphabet macaroni on bits of bark. Some carved their bark into arrow shapes or to look like Oregon before putting their names on them. Some put pine needles, wild flower leaves and painted the macaroni nam's with water colors, either to match their troop colors or any other color they chose. As the hikers returned, they too made name plates.

Wednesday evening following dinner, the girls joined their counselors around the campfire for singing and an impromptu show by a group of the girls modeling sleep wear. Before returning to their own areas, they had hot chocolate and popcorn furnished by the Counselors.

Thursday morning immediately following breakfast the girls cleaned up their areas and packed to return home.

Girls attending the camp were: Sally Bond, Linda Bond, Susie Peyton, Yolanda Jones, Renee Bates, Charlene Lyons from Island City; Marilyn Nicolson, Beverly Schaad, Carol Ann Courtney and Marie Ritehey from La Grande; Colleen Elliott, Joanne Thomas, Jeanne Mason, Marion Crouter and Vera Elliott from Union; Lynda Nelson, Lynn Conley and Teri Adams from Elgin.

Counselors for the camp were Mesdames Delbert Jones, Clyde James, Marjorie Nicolson and Janet Bond.

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann: We've been married 17 years and have four children. For the past three months my husband has been acting strange. He gets up at 2:00 a.m. dresses and leaves the house. He returns about 5:00 a.m., sleeps for two hours then goes to work.

When I asked for an explanation he told me there were Day People and Night People and that he is a Night Person. He said Night People reach the peak of their energy at night and can't sleep. The high point in his energy cycle is 3:00 a.m., he claims.

I thought this sounded fishy so I borrowed by brother's car and followed him last night. He drove to a round-the-clock hash-joint and picked up a waitress. Shall I play dumb say nothing and hope he gets tired of her?

—Shocked wife.
Dear Shocked: Tell your Night-Person that you're aware of what's behind his 3:00 a.m. energy peaks and that he better reorganize his cycle if he wants a home and family. If he tells you he goes to the restaurant because he's hungry offer him the same menu at home.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm not long in your country but I understand the style is to write Ann Landers with problems. Mine is not a problem it is a question. But this is your line, too, I am told.

When I turned on the TV recently I saw an orchestra leader who is very popular in your country. Then it showed young people dancing to his music. I was horrified to see several girls dancing together.

The last time I saw such a thing was on Paris Left Bank at a notorious place called Fred's.

—N.A.K.
Dear N.A.K.: The girls you saw dancing together on TV would much rather dance with boys. I suspect there weren't enough boys to go around—or that no boy asked. I agree however, that two girls dancing together doesn't look very appetizing.
