ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN: As I sit here looking at my husband's beautiful and expensive dentures... float in a glass of water, they seem to be saying "I won—and you lost!"

My husband is a handsome man in his late 40's. With teeth he looks 30. Without teeth he looks 70. I've begged, pleaded, cried, stormed, threatened, and screamed but nothing works. He won't even wear them when he eats. He says his teeth hurt and he refuses to suffer just to please me.

I've talked to his dentist and he says he can't adjust the teeth unless my husband comes to his office. He assured me it would take only three days to become accustomed to the teeth, and almost everyone has some trouble at first.

Please don't cast this letter aside as a joke. This is no laughing matter. I need help.—HELEN.

Dear Helen: Clearly that mule you're married to doesn't care a hoot about the way he looks, so you'd better attack the problem from another angle. Ask the dentist for pamphlet material describing the physical damage caused by toothlessness. It is essential to a healthy digestive system that food be properly chewed. It he reads the dentist's material and still refuses to put the choppers in his head, remind him to keep his insurance up. His life expectancy is decreasing.

DEAR ANN: When I was 12 my folks had more kids than they could feed, so I lived with aunts, cousins, whomever would have me. Naturally, I was in everybody's way and no one cared what I did.

At 14 I got mixed up with a boy. I was lucky not to land in a home for unwed mothers. The boy was 19 and treated me nice. I was so starved for a kind word I did things I had no business doing. He left town a year later and we lost track of each other.

This was 21 years ago and today I'm married and have a good husband and four kids. Last week I got the shock of my life. My old boy friend was introduced to me at work as the brother-in-law of our department head. I know he recognized me but he pretended not to. He just gave me a knowing wink.

I'm worried sick he'll tell the department head what he knows. Shall I beat him to it or get in touch with him and ask him to keep his mouth shut? —BAD PAST.

Dear B.P.: Keep your mouth shut, and unless he's an awful skunk he'll do the same.

DEAN ANN: I'm 15, the oldest of four children. It's common knowledge that our father is chasing with the blonde cashier who works in a parking lot near his office. Several kids at school have seen them together, and I've heard the neighbors discussing it. Mom goes about her business as if everything is perfect. When Dad doesn't come home for dinner she says "he's working very hard for us". This kills me.

Couple Celebrate Golden Wedding Anniversary Here

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Landers celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary August 15 with their children and their families.

The Landers were married in 1909 at Leadwood, Mo., and came to Oregon in 1910.

John Landers worked for the Union Pacific Railroad and retired in 1955.

The anniversary table was decorated with a large three-tiered wedding cake which was topped with the golden letters "50" and white wedding bells. Two large bouquets of gold colored flowers were also used to complete the table.

Guests for the affair included John Landers' father who is 93. Other relatives included Mr. and Mrs. Owen Muthall and their son of Portland, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Landers and children of Aloha, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Landers and children of La Grande.

The Muthall's brought the three-

Missionary Will Speak At Elgin Church Tonight

Rev. and Mrs. Donald D. Owens, returned missionaries to Korea, will be holding services in the Elgin church of the Nazarene tonight at 8 p.m.

In Korea, the Owens have been stationed at Seoul where they are in charge of the Nazarene Bible school and have supervised the mission work.

The missionary message will describe the country and its people. Special songs will be sung and colored slides shown.

Rev. and Mrs. Owens went to Korea in May, 1954.

They returned from a three-tiered wedding cake from Portland with them in honor of the anniversary.
