La Grande Women Attend Convention

Mrs. Louis Rogers returned recently from the Grand International Convention of the Eagles held in Toronto, Canada. As State president of Oregon, she attended the banquet for State presidents. She also served on the Credential committee.

Iva Kennedy attended the convention as a delegate from La Grande. She gave a report to the Eagles concerning the convention sessions, ritualistic and field competition.

Among the celebrities who visited the convention were National Muscular Dystrophy chairman, Jerry Lewis, His Eminence Francis Cardinal Spellman, Richard Reuter, Executive Director of CARE, Hon. George V. Allen, U. S. Information Bureau, who visited Russia with Vice President Richard Nixon.

Allen told many stories of the Russian visit. He said the Russians jammed the American exhibit and were interested in everything American.

Jack Dempsey spoke to the convention on youth activities and Max Baer was also at the meeting.

The high point of the convention was a donation made by the Eagles to the Muscular Dystrophy Society. The presentation was made by the Grand Madam President, Stella Morehouse to Jerry Lewis, national chairman. The group donated a check for $50,000.

All the Eagles' contributions go to research work and nothing is paid for administration expenses. The expenses are paid by the Eagles Grand Aerie. From the fund grants were given to medical schools all over the nation in the sum of $54,932 for research work. Oregon medical school received $2067.63.

Mrs. Rogers and Mrs. Kennedy also visited Niagara Falls, New York City and Washington, D.C. On route home, they spent a day in Chicago and attended a major league baseball game at Wrigley field.

Gettings, Elgin. Services are under the direction of the Daniels Funeral Home.

A Woman's Busy Mind Sometimes Plays Tricks!

by Martha Morgan

A woman's mind is like a clock with wheels and cogs going all different directions at the same time. No profession on earth requires such diversity of thoughts as does that of home-making. It extends from psychology to sweeping, from reading poetry to repairing light plugs, from disciplining children. And this all goes on at the same time!

It's little wonder the cogs sometimes get mixed up. This morning at Alice Jameson's over hot scones and coffee, we got talking about such times. Joyce Brandley started it off by telling that yesterday morning when she went out to burn the trash, she set her plastic waste basket down into the incinerator and calmly set fire to the papers inside. It wasn't until afternoon she realized she'd burned up the waste basket.

Carma's most foolish experience was a little different. She'd been reading a book over her lunch (she'd fed the boys and sent them out), and when she cleared the table, she cleared the book up right along with the dishes and dropped them all in soapy suds to soak.

But Sally Sheffield, who's so meticulous, had the funniest experience of all. A few months ago she took a bottle of orange juice from the refrigerator and carefully poured it through a strainer down the drain!

In spite of all this I still think these young mothers do a marvelous job of keeping their affairs sorted out. It's a miracle to me how they manage with as much efficiency as they do and with as much good grace.

Alice had asked for my recipe for Butterscotch Sauce, so I took it over with me this morning. It's a good sauce — quick to make and rich in flavor. The secret of its goodness is Morning Milk. (For not only does it make it smooth and thick and rich, but it gives it a special blend of flavors that's superb.)

BUTTERSCOTCH SAUCE

(Makes about 1 1/2 cups)

- 1 cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 1/2 cup corn syrup
- 1/2 cup undiluted MORNING MILK
- 1/4 cup butter
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1/2 cup undiluted MORNING MILK

Mix brown sugar, corn syrup and 1/2 cup Morning Milk in saucepan. Heat to boiling. Boil 5 minutes stirring constantly. Add butter and vanilla. Stir until butter is melted. Cool mixture slightly. Add the 1/2 cup Morning Milk. Serve hot or cold.

Enjoy good coffee creamed with Morning Milk!

Answers Your Problems

Dear Readers: Recently I was reminded of that childhood song—"Ten thousand Swedes came out of the woods..."

I feel as if I've been clobbered by at least that many, as a result of my remarks on the "Swedish system."

When a reader criticized my "antiquated sense of morals" and suggested we pattern our attitudes toward sex after Sweden's, I pointed out that the divorce rate in Sweden may be lower than ours, but the percentage of out-of-wedlock babies and suicides make up for it.

The wrath among my Swedish readers packed a wallop that might explain the mystery of Ingemar's right hand.

One of the less vitriolic readers gave an interesting explanation for the high suicide rate in Sweden. Here it is:

Dear Ann: The suicide rate in Sweden is high, but there's a reason. Sweden suicide doesn't carry the stigma of cowardice as in America. Perhaps this can be traced back to the tenth century. It was a disgrace to go to Valhalla from a sickbed. The Vikings built Temple Gardens into which they jumped when they had no chance to die on the battlefield.

In Gåstrikland, Sweden, there is still in existence such a garden. Every year a surprising number of people are lured to this ancient place. The hollow below is very deep so that a jump is truly effective.—A Larson.

Dear Ann: Please don't lecture me; just tell me what to do. For two years I went with what I thought was the most wonderful man in the world. We were planning to marry when his divorce came through.

We were very much in love when I became pregnant. Then his love turned to hate. Our daughter is now seven months old and he treats us like dirt. He says he'll support us so long as we stay with him but I don't think I can stand it much longer. He's a heavy drinker and he's mean when he drinks.

I'm a nurse and can get work any time, but I don't want to leave the baby in someone else's care. He calls me a scheming witch and says it's my fault that things are such a mess. I hate the sight of him, but I feel trapped. What is the sensible thing to do?—Murph.

Dear Murph: Move out of that snake pit and go to work. Not only will it give you a fresh outlook but it will be better for the baby. It's no good for a child to be penned up night and day with a miserable, unhappy mother who hates the man she's living with. In some states the father has financial responsibilities, whether he's married to the mother or not. Check with a lawyer, and get packing.

Dear Ann: Should a 12-year-old boy be forced to eat when he has a headache or has just been scolded by his father? Please answer in the paper. This is important.—Buzzie.

Dear Buzzie: No person (regardless of age) should be forced to eat at any time, for whatever reason. When a person is emotionally upset the stomach is in no condition to receive food. Children who are forced to eat sometimes develop stomach trouble as well as a life-long loathing for certain food.

Herbert Browning Dies in Portland

Services for Herbert Lewis Browning, 2005 Second street, will be held at the Daniels Funeral Home, Thursday at 10 a.m. The Reverend Keith Mills will officiate and burial will be in the Enterprise Cemetery.

Mr. Browning died in a Portland Hospital Sunday, after an extended illness.

Born in Paducah, Ky., July 1, 1887, Mr. Browning has been a resident of La Grande for 45 years. He was a member of the Enterprise Lodge AF and AM, Scottish Rite Masons, Al Kadar Temple, and Elks Lodge No. 433.

He is survived by his son, Harold Browning of Portland, and two grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements were made under the direction of the Daniels Funeral Home.

Even a tomboy looks like a "little lady" when she's wearing spotless white gloves and carrying a little girls handbag that resembles fine lace.
