NEW WATERPROOFING LAST COAT LIFETIME — From London comes coat and ensemble cut with typical British ease and elegance. Coat in fawn color (left) is deeply furled in beaver at neck and cuffs. Silhouette is wide but not excessively full. Ensemble (center) of coat and skirt is in a wool-and-alfa mixture from Scotland. Coat has raglan sleeves and classic cut; skirt is belted and buttoned down the front. Beige cotton raincoat has added luxury of button-in fur lining for warmth when needed (right). It has another luxury; this one is brand new. It's a waterproofing that does not need reproofing after dry cleaning. Coat treated in this fashion will, it is said, stay water repellent as long as the coats themselves last. The fabric is sealed against liquid of all kinds. Spots simply wipe off. (NEA)

ANN LANDERS Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann: I read your column every day because it's amusing. I often wonder if the letters are real or if you make them up. It doesn't matter a hoot to me if you do make them up. They are funny as the dickens and I say more power to you.

If the letters are real can you tell me how people can be so stupid as to get themselves into such awful messes?

I've been married and divorced twice in the past four years and I didn't need help from any newspaper to solve my problems. I knew what I wanted to do in each case and I did it. I just wanted to write and let you know I'm busting my sides laughing at your column. It's fantastic—the number of screwballs in this world.—A man who thinks for himself.

Dear Man: Well bully for you! Two marriage failures and you are bragging that you didn't need any outside help. Congratulations. The operation was a success—but the patient died. It's all right with me if you read the column for laughs, but that's not why I write it. I'll bet you almost died laughing on your way to the divorce court—both times. The letters in this column are real. Thousands of people with problems who can't find their way out of the wilderness.

Dear Ann: I just read the letter from "Vexed" and it certainly hit me. I was ready to write the same letter ten months ago. Would you like to know how it came out? I, too, had a boy friend who showered me with gifts and wouldn't let me be alone. I didn't care for him but he asked nothing of me but my company, so I continued to date. He knew how I felt because I was perfectly honest.

After awhile I became bored gave our 12-year-old son a horse as a surprise. Frankly I don't know why we did it. He didn't beg for one as most children do.

Now I'm a nervous wreck every time he mounts that horse. I worry that he'll be crippled or killed. He's our only child and was born late in our marriage. We considered it a miracle. If anything happened to him I couldn't face life.

I've threatened to sell the horse and saddle but he puts up a terrible fuss. Shall I go ahead and sell over his protest? This thing is making me sick.—Mrs. W. S.

Dear Mrs. W. S.: Your attitude could be more dangerous than the horse. You can't go on fearing for the boy's life forever. You must allow him freedom within reasonable limits, for his sake. See that your son gets riding instructions—and calm yourself. One day he'll be driving a car which is far more hazardous.

"Lots talk dry cleaning"

By Leonard Craig

Taking stock of fall and winter garments comes inevitably with the arrival of fall. That's when milady takes inventory of her wardrobe, especially those which have been stored away during the hot summer months.

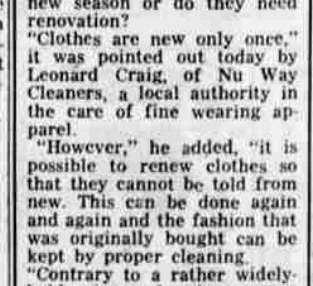

Will they be ready for the new season or do they need renovation? "Clothes are new only once," it was pointed out today by Leonard Craig, of Nu Way Cleaners, a local authority in the care of fine wearing apparel.

"However," he added, "it is possible to renew clothes so that they cannot be told from new. This can be done again and again and the fashion that was originally bought can be kept by proper cleaning.

Contrary to a rather widespread held misapprehension, expert dry cleaning does not wear out clothing. Actually, it really makes the garments wear longer than if they were not dry-cleaned.

"Dry cleaning by the most modern, top-quality methods not only removes surface soil and stains but lengthens the life of the garments by removing the deeply imbedded minute particles of foreign matter with sharp, cutting edges that serrate the fabric threads showing up as wear, and, eventually, shorten the life of the garment."

He pointed out that a newly-developed "soft-set" finish, an integral part of the dry-cleaning job, actually restores the original body of the fabric, so that colors sparkle, patterns revive, and precious fabrics stay looking like new longer.

Remember
Inspect
The garment after wearing—If it is too soiled for the next wearing, it is too soiled to hang back in the closet!
