dry cleaning

By Ed Craig

At least one article in every smart woman's wardrobe this season is likely to be made of makes many peope believe that it sheds lint and dust particals easily. Not so. Its distinctive appearance is produced by countless numbers of loosely held, floating threads which form the surface of the right side of the fabric. This weave is inclined to pick up lint and other tiny particles which often become trapped under the floating threads and take delicate cleaning methods to remove.

Satin is also extremely susceptible to abraision damage. Never rub it with a cloth or home cleaning agent to remove spots. To do so may produce dull blotches which can never be removed.

With satin, as with all fabrics

With satin, as with all fabrics, your cleaner must test it first to see if it is made of silk or cellulose acetate rayon fibers, both of which require special handling. You can be sure of painstaking and expert care when you send us any of your delicate fabrics—satins, silks, chiffons and others. Send them to us with confidence. Prompt pickup and delivery.

Dear Working: My 20th Cen-tury opinion is that Mothers of pre-school children should be at home unless it is essen tial that they work for finan-cial reasons. Young children need a mother's presence. Just knowing she's there is important.
Your troubles are of a different nature, however. You are running away from home be-cause you don't want to be a housewife and a mother. Some thing's wrong with your rela-tionship with your husband and your child. I hope you'll check with a psychiatrist and try to get to the heart of the problem. Running away will solve nothing.

Dear Georgie: It would be perfectly proper (and a high compliment) to ask the family friend. This would also eliminate the sticky problem of which uncle to select. By all means, invite your father as a guest.
