ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann: What is your opinion of a 15-year-old boy who kisses his father goodbye when he leaves the house?

I almost fell over dead when I witnessed this thing at the home of a friend. I commented later to my husband that this was a sure way to make the boy swishy. He said I was all wet. Am I?—Irma.

Dear Irma: Sons kissing fathers is a matter of early training and it means no more than "hello" and "goodbye." Europeans have done this for centuries as a gesture of respect. It's a warm custom and nothing more.

Dear Ann: Our only son married a nice girl two years ago. They recently decided to move to Florida. Last week they brought 20 cartons of personal belongings and set them on our basement floor. They never asked if

Then he said, "I brought two cats. Now don't tell me you won't take them."

I have a horrible fear of cats (which I know is childish) but I can't even touch a cat. I told him we couldn't take them because we both work and are gone all day. He said, "Just put papers down." With that they drove off—mad.

I cried for days and still don't know if we did the right thing to raise a fuss. Should we have taken everything with a smile? Maybe this is what parents are for—Lillian.

Dear Lillian: This is not what parents are for—and the reason your son doesn't know better is because you never taught him.

Parents have an obligation to rear their children to be independent, self-respecting and to have respect for others—including their own parents. You don't have to serve as a
