DREW PEARSON SAYS:

Halleck Of Indiana Pushed GOP Bills Through For Ike

WASHINGTON—Shortly before Congress adjourned, Charlie Halleck, Republican of Indiana, was lying raw and naked on a roundabout table in the Burning Tree Club where Ike golfs. On the next table lay Sen. Tom Hennings, Democrat of Missouri.

"Tom, when are we going to get out of here?" asked Halleck from under a wet towel.

"I'm afraid to talk to you," drawled the senator from Missouri. "I've been heading about you being a tough, relentless, gut-fighter, the Presidents leader in Congress. It didn't sound like the old Charlie Halleck I used to know in the House."

"When are we going to get out of here?" repeated Halleck, undaunted by Hennings' kidding.

"Well, we're all tired of each other, and the country's tired of us," replied the Missouri Democrat. "We ought to give the country a rest and come back in the winter; but you're the President's leader, you're the tough gut-fighter. Why don't you do something about adjourning Congress?"

Senator Hennings was not far off. His old friend Charlie Halleck had more to do with upholding the Presidents hand on a long string of vetoes and running circles around good old 77-year-old Sam Rayburn than anyone else in Washington. And now that Congress has adjourned it might be well to take a brief moment from speculating over Nikita Khrushchev to figure how Charlie did it.

He did it by the simple expedient of promising 33 key southern congressmen everything they wanted in the way of slapping down the Negro, if they in turn would slap down housing, aid to education, rural electrification, a moderate labor bill, and anything else Eisenhower wanted defeated.

In return, the civil rights bill was blocked for weeks in the House Judiciary Committee. Halleck had the votes to bring it out at any time. The 11 Republicans on that committee have been almost completely loyal to him. But the congressmen from the party of Abraham Lincoln threw their weight with south-

Ivan Gets 'Build Up' On Nikita Reception Received In America

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Staff Writer

The man-of-the-week: Ivan, Russia's man-in-the-street.

The place: Moscow.

The quote: "At last it's come true."

Moscow took on a holiday air this week, and the usually stand-offish Russians were extending the hand of friendship to Americans in a way unprecedented since the end of World War II.

The quote above was uttered with a contented smile by a Russian neighbor of UPI correspondent Aline Mosby in a Moscow apartment house. He had invited her in to listen to a radio report of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's arrival in Washington.

The air of unreality in Moscow was enhanced further by the total unreality of the reporting of Soviet news correspondents in their reports back to Moscow.

Wrote a reporter for Izvestia, the Soviet government newspaper: "The streets of Washington are packed with people... a solid line of people lines the sidewalks... people are in windows of houses, on fences and roofs. The applause grows into ovation... all along the way they warmly greet Khrushchev... you hear friendly shouts at Khrushchev."

In Moscow, there was no one to tell Ivan that it wasn't quite that way.

There had been bigger throngs in Washington and certainly more demonstrative ones.

Iceland Seeks U.S. General

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Union lawyers today studied Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell's demand under the new labor reform law that the Teamsters oust all officials who are ex-convicts.

The implied demand was contained in a telegram sent by Mitchell to Teamsters President James R. Hoffa Friday.

Hoffa, who was in Detroit, refused to comment on the move but said the telegram would be studied carefully by the union's legal advisers.

Mitchell asked Hoffa to advise him "what action your organization is taking" against certain types of ex-convicts barred from holding union office under the new labor law passed by Congress earlier this month.

He also asked Hoffa to give him within 10 days a list of any teamster officials who have been convicted of robbery, bribery, extortion and other felonies.

Mitchell's action signaled the government's first action against unions under the act.

The labor secretary, attending the AFL-CIO convention in San Francisco, said he also had asked the Justice Department to begin an immediate investigation of other unions which had ex-convicts or known Communists as officials.

Mitchell did not identify the unions but said they too would be required to send him a list of officials who might be violating the law.

New York Took 'K' In Stride

NEW YORK (UPI)—New York did not see much of the Nikita Khrushchev. But it will not soon forget that they were here for extraordinary days in September of 1959.

A close-up on television was the closest most Americans came to the Soviet premier and his family.

New Yorkers going about their business in town gathered that Khrushchev was on the roll to one of his many appointments whenever they heard the roar of his 75-motorcycle escort in the distance or when traffic came to a standstill for several blocks, usually by coincidence at the rush hour.

Those who had hoped to see Nikita and his wife Nina Petrovna were invariably disappointed.

A glimpse of the Khrushchev profile, the blurred image of a bald head was about the only reward for minutes and even hours of sidewalk waiting.

If Washington gave its attention mostly to Khrushchev, it was Mrs. Khrushchev's turn to triumph in New York.

The luckiest New Yorkers of all were some 1,400 theater-goers who got a good long look at the premier's wife just because they happened to hold tickets for the "Music Man" on the same night as she.

What kind of impact did New York make on the Khrushchevs? This was the 64-ruble question today as the Khrushchevs flew off to Los Angeles.

Mrs. Khrushchev called it a "noisy" city.

Nikita, from the top of the Empire State, said it was a "fine" city, but that Moscow was the best city of all. Every man has a special feeling for his home town, he explained.

The feeling they probably took with them as they flew is that it would be nice, very nice, to come back to New York some day.
