WCSA Prepare For Festival To Be Held In Local Church

Mrs. Worth Epling was hostess to 30 members of the First Methodist Woman's Society of La Grande, which she attended in July. Participating with the Commission on Missions, there will be a family potluck dinner at the church Sunday evening, Oct. 16, after which a medical missionary will speak.

In order to contact members more efficiently a telephone tree is to be worked out.

The study topic of the evening was the United Nations, with Mrs. Don Ainsworth and Mrs. John Miller leading the devotions and lesson. With the assistance of the group, Mrs. Ainsworth sang, "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations." After the lesson she closed the meeting with prayer.

The next general meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Wesley Brown, Nov. 4, at 1:30. Mrs. Sam Ballie and Miss Mabel Doty will be worship and program leaders.

Keep deer meat at its best by cooking it quickly—the quicker the better, advises Andrew Landforce, Oregon State College extension wildlife management specialist. He urges skinning the deer as soon as possible.

It's ideal when deer can be field dressed and immediately taken to camp, home or the cold storage locker to be skinned. Probably the cleanest meat that comes from the woods is handled this way.

If you can't get the deer back to camp and skinned out immediately, field dress and skin the deer in the field. Hanging the deer in a tree is preferred, but if this is impractical remove the hide while the deer is lying on the ground.

Use the skin and meat sacks to keep meat clean while skimming. After the skin is off, quarter the carcass and put the pieces in individual meat sacks. Pack back to camp and hang it up at once. If it is not practical to carry the meat back to camp right away, hang it in a tree or lay it upon poles or rocks on the ground. The poles or rocks allow air to circulate around the meat, speeding up the cooling process.

It is always best to let meat hang and thoroughly cool before moving it. When the meat gets a glaze over it, handling is easier and meat can be kept much cleaner.

Deer eventually will cool out when hung with the hide on. In some cases, deer are downed in circumstances which make skinning impractical, but even then, cool the animal as quickly as possible in order to keep the meat at its best.

Meat from deer as well as from other game has a characteristic flavor. It is not comparable with the meat from any other animal. People eating game for the first time usually try to compare it with beef, pork or other domestic meats.

If you wish to overcome any gamey flavor, choose a highly seasoned sauce when preparing venison for the table. You may use garlic, onion, tomatoes or spices and herbs such as bay leaves, thyme, and savory during cooking.

The characteristic flavor seems to be concentrated in the fat. Trimming away excess fat will help if the flavor is strong. Venison fat seems to turn rancid quicker than that of domestic meat animals. Another reason for trimming fat is that it hardens easily, and has a tendency to cling to the roof of the mouth

Annual Membership Tea Set Saturday

An unusually large number of prospective members is expected to attend the annual membership tea of the La Grande Branch, Women's Society of Christian Service, Saturday, according to Mrs. Eva Miller, who is membership chairman.

The tea will be held in the faculty lounge of the Library on the Eastern Oregon College campus between 2 and 4 p.m.

The acceptance of Eastern Oregon College and a recent change in membership requirements by the national organization have combined to make a large group of women in the La Grande area eligible for membership.

Membership is based, according to Mrs. Miller, not on personal qualifications, but on possession of a degree from a college which maintains standards acceptable to the association. These standards include a proof of academic excellence, proper housing and care of women students, inclusion of a reasonable number of women on the faculty with equal rank and privilege with men, and the requirement of studies in the humanities as a prerequisite for a degree.

A major change in membership policy approved at last June's national convention was the decision to accept all degrees from approved colleges.

Miss Aline Gossage, La Grande Branch president said this change does not represent a lowering of standards but rather a recognition by the association that requirements for degrees have been raised steadily in recent years in specialized fields formerly considered a part of the area of liberal studies. Nearly 400 colleges and universities are now on the association's accepted list.

The association was founded in Boston, Mass., in 1903 by a group of women interested in practical work in education. The Oregon state division contains 29 branches. La Grande branch has been in existence for 29 years.

Although invitations to the membership tea have been sent to all prospective members known to the committee, they have stressed that anyone who is eligible for membership is welcome.

During the tea hours, guests will receive information about the branch activities and the aims and purposes of the association.

Assisting Mrs. Miller with the tea will be Mrs. Elmer Hansen, Mrs. Kettle Mae Crockett, Mrs. Rice McElroy, Miss Beatrice Young, and Mrs. Gordon Clarke.

Between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Persons wishing original licenses or permits to drive are ahead of the scheduled closing hour in order to assure time for completion of the required license test.

You'll find many a man who'll admit that one of life's pleasures is the number of beautiful women that one sees about. But there's always the cynic who's quick to point out that much of today's beauty comes out of a jar or a bottle.

We won't get into this argument... but there's no denying what an important part good cosmetics play in every smart woman's grooming. Unfortunately, they're also a cleaner's headache at times. Cosmetics have to pass the U.S. Food and Drug specification test to assure customers that they are safe to use when in contact with human skin and hair. However, there is no way of determining without careful testing what acid or alkaline content what effect cosmetics will have on fabrics and dyes. Inevitably cosmetics do come off on clothes. And even though a garment may be labeled "color fast," chemical solutions used in cosmetics often neutralize dyes and remove color. So don't ignore such marks or stains on clothing. They should be cleaned promptly.

We'll do our level best to remove cosmetics from clothing safely, and we will always test for chemical reactions. You can assure your cleaning with the confidence that it is in capable, reliable hands. We pick up and deliver.

Boy with backing

A boy needs the strong hand of a Dad to protect him and guide him and help him get off to a good start in life.

Education, for example. Today at least one college degree is a requirement in all of the professions. And by the time this youngster has grown up, college will be a "must" for hundreds of jobs that once only required a high school diploma.

How can you be sure your children will get the education they need—the education they depend on you to make possible? One good way is to start buying U.S. Savings Bonds—and keep buying them.

Because, for most of us, the only way to be sure of the things we want for the future is to save for them. And there's no easier, safer, more satisfying way to save than with U.S. Savings Bonds.

You can buy them automatically, through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work. Or you can buy them where you bank. Either way, Bonds make regular saving painless—and they mount up fast, too.

Of course, Bonds give you a good return: $4 for every $3 you invest, at maturity. But just as important, Every Bond you buy helps America keep the peace. Your country needs your backing, too. So buy Bonds—as many as you can.
