

Newspaper Boys Paid Tribute At Woman's Benefit Meeting

When the Woman's Benefit Association members met Monday evening for their social meeting, they were greeted by a table decorated with a miniature, white satin altar bearing a book of poems of famous authors dated from 1630 to 1930 and published by Mark Van Doren. Banked on either side were miniature baskets of gold mums and blue fall asters. Gold and bronze leaves were strewn among books of "Treasured Verse" and "Ideals" arranged about on the table. A small United States flag stood at attention before the altar. Mrs. W. E. Garrett, president, led in a salute to the flag and followed up with a brief outline of business.

October 17 had been set aside as "National Newspaper Boy Day" so two young salesmen were paid tribute; they were James Zigler and David Dodson, as representatives of those young business starters, in early training of saving and duty, and attention to business.

A panel discussion was participated in by those present.

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann: That 12-year-old boy who complained because his grandmother cut his hair and the kids teased him started me thinking. If more people would cut their kids' hair at home maybe we could get the barber prices down where they belong.

I'm the father of three young sons. We live in Chicago. Every other Saturday the four of us go for haircuts. It costs $1.75 for each boy. Mine is 2.00. I'm almost completely bald. The barber usually gets me out of his chair in 9 minutes.

My 7-and-8-year-olds have crew cuts. Last week I timed them. They were out of the chair in 13 and 15 minutes each. The 5-year-old takes 15 minutes. The barber gets $7.25.

We take a bus both ways. This little excursion chews a $10 bill to pieces. Maybe if you hear from a whole slew of outraged fathers who are tired of getting clipped, both figuratively and literally, we can get the price of haircuts down to where they make sense.

Chicago Pop.

Dear Chicago Pop: I've already heard from a slew of outraged fathers. I'm willing to print a solution to this problem if someone will come up with one. I assume, too, that the barbers have a side. I'd like to hear it.

Dear Ann: My husband and I double date a lot with one couple. Jim used to go with the girl. I'll call her Mae.

I think she is still after him. When we go to the movies she tries to sit next to him. When ever there's music she asks Jim to dance — she doesn't even wait till he asks her. Mae is always reminding him of the swell times they had together. I feel left out. Her husband doesn't say anything but I'm sure he doesn't like it any more than I do.

Jim has no idea I'm worried or upset. I keep telling myself there's nothing to it because Jim broke up with Mae to go with me. But I'm still jumpy inside and worry that maybe I will lose him. Please tell me how to handle this delicate situation. — Uneasy Victor.

Dear Uneasy: If you want real trouble just start to make noises like a jealous wife. Mae sounds like an aggressive female who lost out during courtship because of her pushiness. Most men can tolerate just so much chasing, then they run for cover. Be patient — and silent.

If your hands are rough when mending, tiny snags occur. Try washing your hands in warm water with a small amount of starch added to the water. You'll find it makes the rough spots smooth and prevents snags in the material on which you're working.
