Answers Your Problems

(This is the second of a series of twelve articles by the author of America's most popular humor relations column.)

The Ukraine Hotel in Moscow was a shock for which I was unprepared. It is the newest and the swankiest hotel in the Soviet Union. The Ukraine took four years to build, opened in 1957, and I wouldn't be surprised if it collapsed next week.

A Danish contractor put it this way: "Russians are graph-happy. Everything must go UP. Khrushchev has ordered a crash building program. They don't care how they slap things together, so long as the bricks are on top of each other and it looks big."

An American engineer described the Ukraine Hotel as the shoddiest construction job he'd ever seen. "There is no personal pride, no tradition of craftsmanship in Russia," he declared. "The workers don't give a dam as long as they put in their time."

IMPRESSIVE STRUCTURE
To a passing pedestrian the Ukraine is an impressive structure. It looks like a combination of the Dallas Courthouse and the Shoreham Hotel in Washington, D.C.

The hotel has 1,926 accommodations, some of which are six-room suites. The rooms were designed with no regard for convenience.

comfort or utility. Almost every suite has an office, sitting room, dining room (complete with crystal chandelier), two bedrooms, two baths and a grand piano. There are 100 grand pianos in the Ukraine but not a single waste basket or a piece of writing paper.

The Ukraine employs 700 people, 90 per cent of whom are women. The director of the hotel is an agreeable and astute woman. Somehow in her printed cotton house dress she did not look like one of Moscow's top executives. She told me with considerable pride the hotel has 100 per cent occupancy, regardless of season. "Workers write months in advance for reservations," she declared. "They come here from all over the Soviet Union to vacation."

The lobby is a quarter of a mile of cold, white marble. There's a spittoon in every corner. At the far end of the lobby is the registration desk, manned by four women—three of whom do not speak a word of English. Most tourists pay in advance which eliminates the agony of trying to

'Family Unit' Program Topic

The "Christian Family Unit" was the theme used by Mrs. Mary Ainsworth, devotion leader, and Mrs. Norma Gibson, program leader, for the Wesleyan Circle meeting. Mrs. Genevieve Carter was hostess to 25 members of this First Methodist Church group.

The business meeting was led by Mrs. Polly Scott, president. A report of the success of the November "Fall Festival," was given. Mrs. Helen Cornett was welcomed to the group.

Welcoming of foreign students in this city, was discussed by Mrs. Virginia Timble. It was recommended that persons listen to the "Highroads" program, heard on Saturdays, by the Rev. Mills.

Four Wesleyan members volunteered to help on the Nov. 21, rummage sale in the church Fellowship hall.

Members are also planning to donate blood at the next drawing, in memory of Tommy Bailey
