

Ike Will Run Into Commie Population In Italy Tour

Traveling With Ike — Italy United Press International

Arizona-sized Italy has a population of more than 50 million, 1,700,000 of them card-carrying Communists. Its republican form of government was established in 1946 after Eisenhower-led Allied troops smashed Benito Mussolini's 22-year-long Fascist reign. It is the land that produced Lenin, St. Francis, Leonardo da Vinci, Michaelangelo, the Renaissance, Roman numerals, Julius Caesar and the Roman Empire. It is a strong ally of the United States and a key member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Italy is larger than West Germany, has had less post-war trouble with America than Britain and has more U.S. trade than France.

Its geography varies from snow-capped Alps in the north to rice paddies and orange groves in the south. The country is pock-marked by ancient ruins.

Italy's northern industrial complex produces such world-wide known items as Olivetti typewriters, Necchi sewing machines and Fiat automobiles. But the nation has 1,175,000 unemployed persons.

Italy boasts relatively little juvenile delinquency, Maria Callas, Gina Lollobrigida, perhaps the world's best glass and leather handicraft, tourist-drawing sunny climate, the Isle of Capri, Mt. Etna and Vesuvius, endless fatening foods, Espresso coffee, learning touch at Pisa and almost unatched classic art collections.

Its national spiritual center is the tiny Vatican City in Rome where reigns the Pope, world-wide leader of the Roman Catholic faith. Most popes have been Italians.

Wants Larger Say

Pope John XXIII, 78, on whom the President will call, became supreme pontiff in October, 1958. Born of Italian peasant stock, he served in World War I as an army sergeant. He has held high church posts in Turkey, Bulgaria and France and served as patriarch of Venice. Pope John has energetically unfrozen much Vatican protocol.

Italy has problems. Wracked by the free world's largest Communist Party, it still faces the job of mastering continuing economic troubles. The government's critics feel postwar progress has not been fast enough. Italy, which boasts of being the least troublesome U.S. ally, wants a larger say in top-level Western policy discussions.

LATE TEARS—Alexander Robillard, 19, broke down and cried while giving a tearful account of how he killed Hillsborough policeman Eugene Doran last August. Robillard said, "I didn't know what to do. I didn't think I just fired. Robillard, who has pleaded guilty, will go to trial in Redwood City, Calif.

'Golden Girl' Under Arrest

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI)—A former "golden girl" who used to delight halftime crowds at Purdue University football games has been fined $116 and given a suspended six-months jail term for shoplifting.

Sandra Hutchison, 21, and her mother, Mrs. Shirley Ellen Hutchison, were given the twin suspended sentences after South Bend city Judge Edward Olczak said both had suffered enough from bad publicity.

FINE IMPOSED

The Russian word for such an alliance is "skondil."

When the officer appeared in the City Court to divorce his wife he was shocked to find the court had decided to make an example of him. He was granted the divorce because the blonde was with child but he was ordered to pay one-third of his monthly income to his 55-year-old wife.

He shouted "robber" in the courtroom and moaned that he was being persecuted.

And now I was about to see a Russian divorce trial, thanks to Henry Kline, a Russian-born New York attorney. Although Russian courtrooms are open to all who wish to enter, I felt I would get much more out of the proceedings if I had an interpreter.

Eleonora, my assigned Intourist interpreter, could not accompany me. Her orders were to discourage the "Amerikansky journaliska" from attending any courtroom session. She had told me the proceedings were closed to the public.

This courtroom was even more poorly ventilated and shabbier than the one we had visited the day before. The floors sagged and the plaster walls were cracked. There were only 16 people present, including the three judges.

The first case pitted Anna Ospenskeya against Vladimir Ospenskeya. Anna was employed in a shoe factory. Vladimir was a construction worker. She was suing him for divorce on grounds that he had left her eight years ago to live with another woman. Anna now had two children by Sasha Terminofo, a taxi driver, and was expecting a third.

"It is embarrassing," Anna's lawyer complained. "Anna's two children are in school under the name of Ospenskeya, yet everyone knows the man in the house is named Terminofo. The children should not carry this mark on them."

The lawyer became quite dramatic. Kline told me this was unnecessary because the lawyer had a cinch case and he knew it. It is not uncommon, however, for a client to slip a bonus to an attorney who has performed well.

Vladimir was called to the stand and with eyes lowered he admitted he had left Anna and the children in 1951.

"Why did you desert your family?" one of the judges asked him.

"Because our tempers did not harmonize," Vladimir replied matter-of-factly.

"Divorce granted," the judge announced.

Kline got the details from the Russian lawyer. These proceedings were started almost two years ago and had involved miles of red tape.

"The government makes it difficult," the lawyer confided. "There are too many broken homes. It is not good for society. But still the divorce calendars are jammed and there's always a waiting list."

The next case was Nicolai Petrovitch against Valentina Petrovitch. Nicolai was a dark-eyed, square-jawed man of about 30. He was employed as a waiter in a resort hotel in Odessa. He had taken three days from his job to come to Moscow for a divorce. Nicolai was not represented by counsel.

Valentina, he asserted, had not borne him a child in their four years of marriage. He left her two years ago following what he described as her second self-induced home abortion.

Nicolai was now living with Kerena Jenkonova, who had borne him twin sons. He wanted his freedom from Valentina so he could marry Kerena.

Nicolai spoke for about 10 minutes, describing Valentina as a lazy, no-good wife who neither kept house nor worked at a steady job. He said her mother interfered constantly and had set a match to their marriage from the beginning. He spoke in a forthright, laconic manner that sounded rehearsed but nonetheless convincing.

CHARGE DENIED

The judge asked Valentina, a pimply-faced mountain of a girl, to take the stand. She was seated next to her mother who wept and wrung her hands through out the proceedings.

"Is it true you caused yourself to have two home abortions?" the judge asked.

"It is a lie," she shouted angrily. "The first abortion was nature's work. The second was because of Nicolai. He beat me with his fists during an argument and caused me to lose the baby the same evening."

"Do you have a witness?" the judge asked.

"I have not witness. How did I know he would make up such a lie?"

"Do you wish to contest the divorce?" the judge asked.

"I don't want him any more. The other woman can have him, and it will serve her right."

The judge announced a brief intermission and everyone adjourned to the hall. Kline asked me if I had seen enough. I had. The words of the Russian psychiatrist came back to me—"Nobody has problems in Russia," he had said smugly. "The system takes care of everything."

New Agricultural Movies Produced By Union Pacific

Two new agricultural movies have been produced by the Union Pacific railroad for free use by community and school groups.

The 16 mm. sound and color movies are "New Horizons Along the Milky Way" and "Raising Dairy Calves."

"New Horizons," a 26-minute movie about modern dairying, encourages the consumption of more milk products. The movie shows operations at 20 Northwest dairy farms and processing plants.

"Raising Dairy Calves" is a 10-minute movie teaching how to raise calves for herd replacements. The Union Pacific also has 12 movies about other agricultural subjects.

Carbon Monoxide, Mass Hysteria

STILLWATER, Okla. (UPI)—Deadly carbon monoxide gas and mass hysteria felled about 300 high school students Monday night—most of them girls—and affected another 700 students and adults during a choral festival at Oklahoma State University.

Officials said the poisonous gas fumes were sucked into the building through fresh air vents from the numerous buses parked around the huge field house with their motors running.

Physicians said none of the students was in serious condition and the only effects were temporary unconsciousness, nausea and cramps.

matter of FACT

"The life of Ma-ka-lai-meshe-kia-kia" is an autobiography written or dictated by Black Hawk (1767-1838), chief of the Sac Indians. In 1830, his lands were sold by the Sac to the U.S., but he could not bear to see them occupied by white people so in 1832 he started fighting in the Rock River Valley near Rock Island, Ill. Although reinforced by 1,000 warriors, Black Hawk was defeated and taken captive.
