

Earl Long Defeated By Voters

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—Having been cast aside by the voters in favor of more decorous candidates, Gov. Earl K. Long faced a future of fast declining power in Louisiana government and politics today.

He ran third in a field of six candidates for lieutenant governor — the law prevented him from running for governor — in a Democratic primary election Saturday and James A. Noe, 67, whom Long backed for governor, ran fourth.

In his home parish (county), of Winn, voters refused to elect him to the Central Democratic Committee. Long, 64, will serve as governor until next May.

The faith of voters in him evidently was shaken by his escapades last summer during a southwestern tour, plans to divorce his wife and his public identification with strip tease Elzate Starr and a woman recently arrested for soliciting.

His successor will be chosen Jan. 9 in a runoff between the two leaders in the gubernatorial primary: Mayor deLesseps S. Morrison, 47, of New Orleans, and Jimmie H. Davis of Shreveport, a cowboy singer and movie actor, who has served one term as governor.

Unwed Moms Again Facing Jail Terms

MARTINEZ, Calif. (UPI)—Two unwed mothers were scheduled to return to jail today for getting pregnant in violation of a judge's order.

Lucy Martinez and Lucy Turrietta, both 24, were convicted of fraudulently accepting county aid to needy children. They were accused of receiving more than $21,000 in aid for their 19 illegitimate children over a period of 10 years.

They were granted probation more than a year ago by Judge Michael J. Gatto of the Pittsburg Judicial Court on the conditions that they refrain from sexual intercourse until they were married.

He ordered the Pittsburg women to jail last month when he learned that Miss Turrietta had given birth to a girl—and Miss Martinez was expecting twins.

Albert M. Bendich, an attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union, argued that the constitutional rights of the women had been violated because they were arrested for engaging in sexual intercourse.

Bendich contended that "it is respectfully submitted that sexual intercourse between two adults, freely consenting persons, in the privacy of their own home, is a fundamental aspect of personal liberty and privacy guaranteed by due process of law."

Last week the state District Court of Appeals in San Francisco granted a petition of habeas corpus in response to Bendich's arguments. The mothers were freed on $1,000 bail pending hearing on the case.

However, the court reversed itself Friday without comment and ordered the women back to jail. A spokesman for the Contra Costa County Jail said they were expected to surrender today.

Sunday, December 7, Remembered As 'Day Of Infamy' During 1941

UPI Staff Writer
United Press International
WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sunday is a day off for Washington newspaper people, or most of them. Washington cherishes the entire weekend. This particular Sunday not only was a day off, it was glorious. Winter had not yet settled on the Atlantic seaboard.

The biggest weekend local news had been the formal report of the Secretary of Navy that our Navy was "second to none." Earlier in the week the House of Representatives had passed the Third Supplemental National Defense Appropriations Bill, a matter of $8.2 billions. The vote had been 309 to 5. President John J. the National Aeronautical Association just had reported that within 12 months our production rate would exceed 50,000 airplanes a year.

Washington felt it had reason to be what it was: Safe, warm and comfortable in Griffith Stadium, Washington's beloved Redskins were playing the season's last professional home game. A great many admirals, generals and high civilian brass were watching. Others were playing golf. The community was out in the open, but for lag-abeds, the hung-over and the ill.

That is how it was on that day of infamy, the Seventh Day of December, 1941, in Washington, D.C.

Shortly after 2:35 p.m., Steve Early, White House Press Secretary, asked Louis Hochmeister to set up a simultaneous conference telephone call to the press associations.

"All on," Steve asked urgently, and called the roll.

"This is Steve Early at the White House," he said with as much composure as he could summon. "At 7:35 a.m., Hawaii time the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor. The attacks are continuing and, no, I don't know how many are dead."

That was about all Steve had then. The time of awaiting events had ended. By telephone, broadcast and loud speaker, the call went out. Idle caddies called around the golf links calling men back to their desks. Bewildered thousands in Griffith Stadium heard one, another and, finally, scores of Army, Navy and other government personages scrambled. As the big shots scrambled, others hurried away, too. They were the newspaper and radio men and women who had heard those urgent calls and suspected what they meant.

Radio broadcasts put the brakes screeching on many an automobile within one or two hundred miles of Washington that day, turned the car around and started it home much faster than the law allows.

Hour by hour, the cruel facts pounded in: Pearl Harbor was a shambles, the anchored fleet a ruin. There were hundreds, now thousands, dead or wounded. During 80 minutes in Hawaii the United States had suffered its most crushing defeat at arms.

Not unnaturally, by early Sunday evening the gathering at Washington's National Press Club approached presidential-election night numbers. Newsmen caught in a storm of crisis sought another's company, one another's comfort in the easy-going headquarters where they were accustomed to find such things.

A little Japanese newsman temporarily assigned to Washington spent the evening in the United Press Bureau, weeping and assuring everyone that he, for one, was so sorry. From the grass roots came roaring through the night air the still unanswered questions:

"How did it, why did it happen? Who goofed?"

Atom Sub Launching Record For December

GROTON, Conn. (UPI)—The nation's shipyards reach an all-time record this month in launching two atomic submarines and turning another three over to the Navy for duty with the fleet.

The first Polaris-missile firing submarine, George Washington, will be commissioned here Dec. 10 at the yards of Electric Boat, Division of General Dynamics Corp., the same day that the first Regulus missile-firing sub, Halibut, is commissioned at Mare Island, Calif., naval shipyard.

Seadragon, the last of four of the Skate-class production line subs to be built, was commissioned today at Portsmouth, N.H., naval shipyard.

The Washington-class Polaris firing Robert E. Lee will be launched at Newport News, Va., shipbuilding yards Dec. 18 and on the following day the second of six high-speed Skipjack-class boats, USS Scorpion, will slide off the Electric Boat ways.

Three other Polaris firing subs of the Washington class are under construction and two of them, the Patrick Henry and Theodore Roosevelt, were launched this fall. The last of five under contract, the Abraham Lincoln, is due off the ways early next year. These subs can fire missiles with a range of 1,500 miles while surfaced or submerged and can exploit the North Pole region as a strategic offensive position.

More New Ones
Work already is well under way on a new and advanced type of Polaris sub, the Ethan Allen. The keel was laid here Sept. 14 and it is being rushed for commissioning late next year. Four of the Ethan Allen class are on order.

The world's first nuclear submarine designed to track down and kill off other submarines, USS Tullibee, is slated for launching here by next spring.

If production schedules are met the Navy expects to have 29 atomic subs operational by the end of 1960. It has 33 in the works and reportedly will ask authorization for another three next year.

Thus, as the year ends, the Navy fleet of 10 nuclear submarines in action, five of them rushed to completion this year. The world's largest, the radar-picket twin-reactor USS Triton, joined the fleet here Nov. 10 and the phenomenal aquabatic Skipjack on April 19.

Their predecessors are Nautilus, Seawolf, Skate and the skate-class Swordfish and Sargo. One keel-laying is slated this month. Work will start on the Thresher-type USS Plunger Dec. 31 at Mare Island, Calif., naval shipyard. Nine of these advanced Skipjack-class subs are under contract.

Ban Two Livestock Vaccines
Two livestock vaccines have been banned for use in Oregon by the state department of agriculture.

The vaccines are virulent hog cholera virus, known as live virus or blood virus vaccine, and live culture erysipelas vaccine. The latter is technically known as erysipelas typhiphathiae vaccine.

Both vaccines are completely outlawed in the state. This covers purchase, possession, sale, barter, trade, giveaway or any other disposition or holding of one or both, the department declared.

These vaccines in the live form are potential spreaders of the respective diseases in swine. It is for that reason that the vaccine has been banned, State Veterinarian Dr. L. E. Bodenweiser said.

Mr. and Mrs. Dean Puckett and grandson, Earl Dean Davis, left for Portland to spend Thanksgiving with their daughter, Mrs. Marilyn Davis and family.
