Red Bloc Uses Camp David Spirit To Good Advantage

By PHIL NEWSOM

to have any world-shaking effect. The Russians found frequent cause to mention the amicable meeting between Premier Nikita Khrushchev and President Eisenhower and to cite the "Camp David spirit" at such times as when the West brought up the embarrassing question of continued occupation of Hungary by Soviet troops.

The Russians said such questions violated the Camp David spirit.

Score Propaganda Victory

On the propaganda side, the Russians scored with Khrushchev's appearance before the assembly and his generalized proposal for total world disarmament in four years.

On the debit side for the Communists was their failure to prevent assembly action deploring their actions in Hungary, or a resolution calling for "respect" for the fundamental rights of the Tibetan people. They failed also to halt a U.N. investigation of charges of Communist aggression in Laos.

It was felt that the Russians gained a point and United States prestige suffered when the Communists were able to force a compromise dividing the contested security council between Poland and Turkey.

The resolution sending the disarmament problem to a 19-nation committee contained enough of the flavor of the Khrushchev proposal to permit the Soviets to claim a tactical victory there also.

Passed Resolutions Mild

All resolutions passed by the assembly were comparatively mild and lacked the strong terms of such earlier U.N. dictates as when year ago the assembly told Russia to get its troops out of Iran, and Russia did.

A number of factors contribute to the U.N.'s changing complexion.

One is the Camp David spirit and the belief, ill-founded or not, that world tensions are relaxing.

Another more important one is the growth of the Afro-Asian bloc which next year will gain as four more independent nations emerge in Africa.

Rev. Mills Guest Speaker At Noon Meet Of Lions

The Rev. Keith Mills, pastor of the First Methodist Church, brought an annual Christmas message to members of the La Grande Lions at their regular weekly noon luncheon meeting at the Scajawewa.

The modern celebration of Christmas has become so commercialized that many folks have lost the true religious meaning of the season," Rev. Mills stated, "and perhaps it is about time that people thought pretty seriously and did something about putting Christ back into Christmas."

Clare and Lyle McMullen entertained club members with an exploration of the possibilities of the popular Christmas carol "Jingle Bells."

Bud See, Pendleton, was club guest for the day. Al Kaiser was program chairman.
