8 p.m. on CW
Warigami

Originally conceived and produced as a short-form series, this unusual contemporary samurai action drama stars Emily Piggford ("The Girlfriend Experience") as Wendy Ohata, who is struggling to process three life-altering epiphanies: She has a twin brother, she is a descendant of an ancient Japanese people who can turn paper into lethal weapons, and a warrior of that same heritage is currently hunting her down for reasons she can't fathom. The cast also includes Kai Bradbury, Akiel Julien, Miho Suzuki and David Hewlett also star.

9 p.m. on PBS
Country Music

Master documentarian Ken Burns turns his lens on an American musical art form that was born of love and loss in this new eight-part, 16-hour limited series that explores the history of country music, starting with its roots in 1920s Appalachia up to its more pop-and-rock-inflected modern sound. Tonight's premiere, "The Rub (Beginnings — 1933)," examines the birth of country music, which found early stars in such pioneers as the Carter Family and Jimmie Rodgers.

10 p.m. on COM, NICK, PARMT, TVL
The Comedy Central Roast

Emmy winner Alec Baldwin certainly knows how to make fun of powerful people, but how good is he at taking it? Audiences may get an answer to that as he appears as the guest of honor — and, thus, chief target — in the latest edition of this long-running series of comically barbed "tributes." It's likely to be friendly fire, though: Sean Hayes, Baldwin's frequent "Will & Grace" colleague, is the roastmaster. Among the guests are Debra Messing, Robert De Niro and Joel McHale.
