Women's college hoops tips off

By Doug Feinberg

The Associated Press

As soon as Sabrina Ionescu announced she was returning for her senior season at Oregon, the women's college basketball landscape changed.

The Oregon Ducks became the favorite to win the championship after falling in the Final Four last season to Baylor — the eventual title winners.

Ionescu has been one of the most electrifying players in college hoops the past few seasons, shattering the triple-double record. She's the projected No. 1 pick in the WNBA draft next spring. The All-America guard has a lot of help at the Pac-12 school, including star forward Ruthy Hebard.

Don't count Oregon coach Kelly Graves among those who already have handed the title to the Ducks, who earned the first AP Top 25 No. 1 ranking in school history last week.

Graves said that a few times a week someone would text him or tell him at the local Costco's that they'll see the Ducks in New Orleans, the site of this season's Final Four. Graves has the same response to all of them: "I hope we're there. You can buy yours we have to earn ours."

The Ducks may have a tough time winning their own conference as the Pac-12 is once again one of the best in the country, with Stanford and Oregon State the main two challengers.

Even with the Ducks the favorite, this might be the first time in a while that there aren't four clear-cut choices to reach the Final Four. Perennial contender UConn will have to find replacements for graduated stars Katie Lou Samuelson and Napheesa Collier.

The Huskies have made the Final Four a record 12 consecutive years. Coach Geno Auriemma sees this season more open than the past decade or so when his team has dominated.

"We were accused for a number of years of it being the same teams all the time," the Hall of Fame coach said. "We were on the verge of becoming college football. So, it's good that there's new faces up there."

BEAVERS

Terrell Gomez led CSUN with 19 points, Elijah Harkless scored 15 and Darius Brown II 13 points.

The Matadors were missing sophomore forward Lamine Diane, who is academically ineligible and did not accompany the team to Corvallis. He averaged 24.2 points and 11.8 rebounds last season and was the Big West Conference player of the year.

"Right now we're without him and we don't know for how long," Gottfried said. "It leaves us with a hole, but we've gotta solve the problem."

Ethan Thompson had 14 points and Zach Reichle scored 13 for OSU. The Matadors kept things interesting in the second half and cut the lead to 63-57 on Gomez's 3-pointer with 10:08 left.

But the Beavers responded with a 17-2 run to take command.

opening basket of the second half, Oregon scored the next 10 points, six by Pritchard and the other four on assists by the senior to finish fast breaks.

"Our defense at the start of the second half was really good," Altman said. "I was really encouraged by the start of the second half"

Fresno State briefly closed within 64-55 with four minutes left before the Ducks put it away with free throws, finishing with 20 in 27 attempts.

"This was a good start for us, we had to compete," Altman said. "I knew we'd have our hands full."
