Art shows open online for First Friday

Large gatherings are still discouraged by the state, so galleries move shows online for the second month

BAKER CITY — Although Baker City's First Friday isn't quite back to normal, Crossroads Carnegie Art Center and Churchill Hall Pass Gallery will hold virtual art shows.

CROSSROADS CARNEGIE ART CENTER

Crossroads welcomes landscape and wildlife photographer Kendrick Moholt to the gallery with "An Untamed World."

The show opens Friday, May 1. Due on the current restrictions, this wild show has moved to the digital realm. Members of Crossroads will receive a direct link to the digital show, Crossroads will make it available on Facebook and Instagram, and a video will be hosted on Vimeo (https://vimeo.com/408045663). Also check the website, www.crossroads-arts.org.

Viewers who wish to make a purchase can send an email to crystal@crossroads-arts.org to make arrangements.

Moholt received a bachelor's in zoology from Oregon State University and a master's in avian behavior from Idaho State University.

He has spent the last three decades exploring all seven continents to capture the images of our world — both the familiar territory and the unknown wild.

With his background as a field biologist, Moholt has documented his adventures with the accessibility of photography and imagery. He captures the characteristics and emotive qualities of wildlife with landscape photography.

"From a rustic home in the wilds of Northeast Oregon to the most remote locations on earth, I am constantly amazed and challenged by the endless forms and variations that occur in the natural world," the artist said.

Work by Jennifer Godwin

"A person could spend a lifetime exploring and interpreting such things. I intend to do so. In the end, the project is meant to portray the global impacts of human action when viewed from the scale of a single lifespan while contrasting this to the insignificance of humans when viewed on a geological timescale."

Call 541-523-5369 or email info@crossroads-arts.org for more information about Crossroads or the show or to join the center's mailing list. And be sure to check out www.crossroads-arts.org to view scheduled classes and upcoming events.

While the art center is currently planning a summer schedule of classes, it will depend on the coronavirus as to how these classes are made available. For updates, check the center's Facebook page and website.
