Cars filled with Enterprise High School seniors and their families park around the school's track Saturday for graduation in order to maintain social distancing regulations due to the coronavirus pandemic. Most people brought chairs and/or a ground cloth so they could sit outside their vehicle and enjoy the event. One family brought a small sofa.

ENTERPRISE — After being left alone and seemingly abandoned since March, Enterprise High School's track and athletic field got a real workout Saturday afternoon in the form of the school's graduation. Thirty-four seniors received diplomas, including three as valedictorians and two as salutatorians.

The outdoor ceremony went off without a hitch. Clouds that seemed to threaten never spilled a Graduation began with an entry procession of vehicles, each bearing a student and their immediate family. Kevin McCadden's Corvette served as the pace car, leading the alphabetically organized procession onto the high school track and parking them around the periphery of the field while the standard graduation entry of "Pomp and Circumstance" played over the loudspeakers.

Principal Blake Carlsen began the ceremony with a brief welcome, then class president and co-valedictorian Tishrei Movich-Fields followed with another welcome. She and fellow valedictorians Natalie Goldsmith and Anna Moholt each addressed the crowd.

Co-salutatorian Austyn Duncan focused her speech on the curveballs that life throws — you never know how many curveballs you are going to face.

"Actually," she said, "the idea of the future just kind of terrifies me in general. The amazing thing is that not all of the curveballs that life throws at you are bad."

The senior class' other salutatorian, Foster Hobbs, turned his attention to the future.

"Today," he said, "the class of 2020 is stepping out into a world full of confusion, distrust and darkness. A world where we are farther apart than at any time in human history.

It seems as though excitement and wonder are gradually disappearing. What can we do to fix this? My request to us all: Take time to practice happiness and compassion. We have nothing to lose by being happy and kind, but we lose everything if we decide not to."

Superintendent Erika Pinkerton presented the Enterprise High School class of 2020 their diplomas, saying, "You are all full of excellence, you are full of honor, and you are full of humbleness. I'm extremely proud of each and every one of you and your accomplishments. I want to congratulate all of you. I'm happy to recommend that the students around the track have earned every component to the certificate of diploma and the great state of Oregon. I proudly present to you the Enterprise High School class of 2020."

Following the award of diplomas, the Enterprise police and fire department escorted the cavalcade of cars, trucks, students and families through Enterprise in the traditional celebratory hornhonking and siren-blasting parade through downtown Enterprise.

Salem prison now is site of state's biggest coronavirus outbreak

Maximum security prison not designed for social distancing

SALEM — The number of coronavirus cases continues to rise at the Oregon State Penitentiary, which this week became the source of the single largest known outbreak of the virus in the state.

On Friday, the Oregon Department of Corrections said a total of 141 people at the prison — 115 inmates and 26 employees — have tested positive. A southeast Portland nursing home is the source of the state's second largest outbreak.

Four inmates at the maximum-security prison in Salem have been treated for the disease at local hospitals, including one man who died Wednesday. It was the first inmate death from coronavirus in Oregon.

The man had been transferred May 18 to Salem Hospital and was tested that day. May 19, the results confirmed he had the virus. He died the next day.

Like the vast majority of people who have died from the illness in Oregon, the man had an underlying health condition, prison officials said. Citing the confidentiality, the state declined to identify the man, saying only that he was between 50 and 60 years old.

Built in 1866, the state penitentiary, a hulking complex of imposing cellblocks, was not designed with a pandemic in mind.

Searchers use cellphone data to rescue lost climber on Mount Hood

Associated Press

PORTLAND— Searchers rescued a lost climber on Mount Hood by tracking his phone data, officials say.

The crew found 31-year-old Nicolas David Larson of Sunriver early Saturday morning. He was taken to a nearby hospital for treatment of hypothermia.

Larson was reported missing Friday evening by a friend who had received text messages from him. Sgt. Marcus Mendoza with the Clackamas County Sheriff's Office said. The lost climber called 911 himself a short time later. Larson said he had reached the summit of Mount Hood on Friday, but became lost in whiteout conditions. He had protein bars but no water, and told dispatchers his cellphone battery was about to run out.

Searchers looked through the night and found Larson at about 6,200 feet on the west side of Mount Hood around 2 a.m. About 30 people participated in the rescue, including crews from Portland Mountain Rescue, the Clackamas County Sheriff's Office and other groups.

Filmmaker searching for Oregon families of victims in WWII attack

By Kyle Spurr EO Media Group

BEND — Four men from Oregon were killed during World War II in one of the deadliest attacks at sea in U.S. history.

The HMT Rohna, a British transport ship carrying American soldiers, was hit Thanksgiving Day 1943 by a German missile off the coast of North Africa. It killed 1,015 American troops, including the four men from Oregon.

The 966 survivors were ordered to remain silent or face court-martial, and the incident remained classified long after the war, according to Jack Ballo, a New Jersey-based filmmaker who is documenting the secrecy around the attack for his film "Rohna: Classified."

On Memorial Day, as families remember their loved ones killed serving in the U.S. military, Ballo is searching for relatives of the soldiers killed on the HMT Rohna. He hopes to possibly offer some closure. Most of the living relatives are either second- or third-generation descendants of the soldiers and likely have no idea how they were killed, Ballo said.

Ballo also wants to learn more about the soldiers. He has only brief descriptions from military records. He has the name and city or county of the Oregon soldiers, but no other details.

The four Oregon soldiers were: Elmer J. Laine of Astoria, Norman J. Gillespie of Aumsville, James R. Webb of Umatilla County, and Warren
