“Movie: Enola Holmes”

Millie Bobby Brown (“Stranger Things”) stars as the title character in this adventure movie about the teenage sister of Sherlock Holmes, who gets caught up in a mystery involving a young runaway while she herself is on the run from a life she abhors and searches for her missing mother. Henry Cavill and Sam Claflin are also in the cast. (ORIGINAL)

“Whose Vote Counts, Explained”

With election security being called into question amid talk of powerful donors, gerrymandering, voter suppression and ballot box fraud as Election Day nears, this well-timed documentary series breaks down how the process of tabulating votes works — and whether it is indeed possible to rig a U.S. election. “Michelle Buteau: Welcome to Buteaupia”

With a goblet of frosé in hand, the New Jersey-born comic lets loose on a number of topics, among them parenthood, relationships, cultural differences, government workers who like her and the overlooked value of short men, in this brutally honest stand-up performance recorded in early March at New York’s Sony Hall. “American Murder: The Family Next Door”

Jenny Popplewell (“Jamie: Drag Queen at 16”) directed this documentary that looks at the 2018 disappearance of 34-year-old Shanann Watts and her two daughters in Frederick, Colo., through archival footage that includes law enforcement recordings, text messages, social media posts and home movies, thus offering an examination of a police investigation and a disintegrating marriage.
