

CROSSROADS CARNEGIE ART CENTER

What's the plan for Crossroads?

■ Current 'freeze' affects art classes

BAKER CITY— Due to a statewide "freeze" in an effort to slow cases of COVID-19, Crossroads Carnegie Art Center has put their roster of art classes on hold through at least Dec. 7.

As of right now, Crossroads will still offer a "Take It and Make It" craft activity on Dec. 5. Plans are still in the works for how to make this work — it may be a drive-thru style, in which case the location is still to be announced.

(In normal years, this craft session is held in conjunction with the Festival of Trees, which has been canceled this year.)

Doors are open

Crossroads continues to be open regular hours: Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The current show features work by Nancy Coffelt and Jessica Faulk.

The annual Ornament Expo is currently on display, and other items — such as handmade cards and jewelry — are stocked in the sales gallery. The "Christmas at Crossroads" show opens Dec. 4.

"We are working to get our sales gallery on our website so people can buy artwork and pick up or have it shipped," said Ginger Savage, executive director.

Gift certificates also are an idea for holiday shoppers who are looking to support local businesses. Savage said people can buy memberships as gifts, or purchase gift certificates for art classes in 2021.

Savage said Crossroads is working with CASA of Eastern Oregon, Baker City Downtown, Baker Chamber of Commerce, Baker City Kiwanis and Baker Heritage Museum to plan safe holiday activities.

The organizations, she said, will get word to schools and advertise around town, and residents are encouraged to stay updated on changes by checking websites and Facebook.

"All these partners are working hard to do their very best for our community," Savage said.
