In addition to being beautiful, coral reefs also are home to more than a quarter of all marine life, which makes them crucial to human societies around the globe as well. The new episode "Reef Rescue" examines how marine biologists are teaming up from around the world to counteract the catastrophic damage climate change is wreaking on these reefs due to warming ocean waters. Using a technique called assisted evolution, these scientists are trying to crossbreed heat-resistant corals and even transplant algae from healthy corals.

Critical Care: America vs. The World — PBS NewsHour Presents

This new one-hour special report explores the highs and lows of America's fragmented healthcare system and explores how four other countries manage to offer health coverage to all citizens more efficiently. As the Biden administration seeks to expand coverage during a global pandemic, the United States still has the most expensive health care system in the developed world, with worse health outcomes compared to its international peers — and 30 million Americans are going with no health insurance at all.
