“Movie: Venus and Serena”

With that title, anyone who knows tennis won't be surprised to find this is a documentary about the sport's iconic Williams sisters. The film concentrates on their performances in 2011, when a variety of crises threatened their standings in the game ... but their off-court lives get as much attention, through candid footage that also details the huge role their father played in their progress.

“Movie: Frankie & Alice”

Halle Berry took a sharp turn away from her superhero persona in the “X-Men” movies to play a decidedly mortal character in Frankie, a stripper struggling with multiple personalities who puts herself in the care of an eccentric psychotherapist (Stellan Skarsgard, “Chernobyl”). Phylicia Rashad, Chandra Wilson and Matt Frewer also star in this 2010 biographical drama.

“Movie: Forgetting Sarah Marshall”

The forgetting isn't so easy for a composer (Jason Segel) after his television star girlfriend (Kristen Bell) leaves him in this raunchy comedy from producer Judd Apatow. Trying to shake his grief, the jilted guy goes to a Hawaiian resort where the other guests turn out to include his ex-love and her new rock-star beau (Russell Brand). Mila Kunis, Paul Rudd and Jonah Hill also appear.

“The Underground Railroad”

Oscar-winning screenwriter Barry Jenkins (“Moonlight”) is the creative force behind this limited series that chronicles the flight to freedom of Cora Randall (newcomer Thuso Mbedu), who discovers an actual railroad with tracks, engineers and conductors beneath the soil of the Georgia plantation where she works and lives. Chase W. Dillon, Joel Edgerton and Aaron Pierre also star. (ORIGINAL)
