tonight's best

Drew Barrymore

8 p.m. on CBS
48th Annual Daytime Emmy Awards

After being banished to streaming platforms in recent years, the Daytime Emmys return to their longtime broadcast network home of CBS, with Sheryl Underwood as host. Among this year's nominees, former "Jeopardy!" game show host Alex Trebek and talk show staple Larry King ("Larry King Now") are both nominated posthumously for their final shows. Drew Barrymore earned a nod for her fledgling talk show, vying with "The Ellen DeGeneres Show," "The Kelly Clarkson Show," "Live With Kelly and Ryan" and NBC's "Today With Hoda & Jenna."

8 p.m. on SYFY
Departure

Originally aired on a U.S. streaming service, this 2019 British-Canadian thriller makes its cable debut as a three-night event series airing through Sunday. Archie Panjabi ("The Good Wife") stars as Kendra Malley, an transportation official tasked with investigating the disappearance of a British passenger plane over the Atlantic Ocean. Christopher Plummer stars as Kendra's mentor, while Kris Holden-Ried plays her partner in the investigation. Another episode follows tonight's premiere.

10 p.m. on FX
The Choe Show

Is there such a thing as "radical empathy"? Celebrated artist and star David Choe thinks there is, as he demonstrates by turning his quirky, compassionate yet sometimes disruptive worldview into a lens for the audience to experience a kinship with others around them. From inside his childhood home, Choe takes guests on a journey during which he becomes both a motivational interviewer and a compassionate listener. Both he and his guests have a shared emotional experience by using art and play as tools to connect. Three other episodes follow the premiere.
