

Woman can't accept ex's new girlfriend

DEAR ABBY
ADVICE

Dear Abby: I've been divorced from my husband of 18 years for two years, separated for three. I have encouraged my ex to get out and meet new people. (He stayed home and alone for about two years.) It must have been a New Year's resolution of his because I no longer receive random texts to ask how I'm doing or to make casual conversation.

When I asked him who she was, he replied, "Nobody." Of course, I know him well, and I knew he wasn't being truthful. He's 50; she's 25. I'm grossed out, mostly because our older daughter is 27. The younger one is 22. I know I should be happy for him, but I'm not.

We still celebrate holidays as a big, old, happy family, which I don't mind. We have grandchildren, and I want the holidays to be special. But I have no desire to celebrate them with someone who is barely older than my younger daughter. I know it likely won't go anywhere, but what the heck?

I'm in a happy relationship. Granted, I'm enjoying life and not planning my future or anything like that. My mind says one thing; my heart says another. Do I need therapy? Are these normal feelings? — Thrown in Montana

Dear Thrown: It would be abnormal not to have "some" reaction to the new woman in your ex's life. That he's obscuring the truth from you tells me he may feel guilty about the age difference or worried you will be judgmental. Therapy may help you accept that he's now the captain of his fate, so it's no longer necessary for you to help him navigate the seas of life. It would be cheaper to simply let go, allow him to make some mistakes along the way and focus instead on your own present and future.

Dear Abby: My heart is heavy for my sister-in-law, "Becca," and her family. Her brother recently passed away. He'd been ill, but no one expected his death. To make matters worse, his wife didn't contact his family about his death for several days and had him cremated without notifying them. They learned about his death when his obit was posted on Facebook.

From what I've been told, his wife has had little to no contact with his family. Becca can't understand what could have been her problem. He was an only son and brother. They didn't have an opportunity to say goodbye; therefore, they don't have closure. His sister and mother are grief-stricken and angry.

I can only offer words of comfort and prayers. With so many unanswered questions behind all of this, what is the best way to offer comfort and support? Or should I just give them time? — So Much Pain

Dear So Much Pain: Please accept my condolences for your family's loss. Call Becca and her family often. Even better, deliver your words of comfort by visiting in person if she would appreciate the company. Offer to help with shopping for groceries, laundry — whatever she might be too depressed to do herself right now. And then give her time to heal.

LAKE

These "silvers" travel in schools that move up and down throughout the water column in response to water temperature, light, and presence of their favorite prey: zooplankton.

Olive Lake campground is 12 miles west of the old mining town of Granite, and 27 miles east of Dale on Highway 395. The fee-based, first-come, first-served, campground features 28 campsites, toilet facilities, a boat ramp and two docks. A two-mile hiking trail circles the lake. No potable water or garbage service is available. Gas and electric trolling boat motors are allowed but no personal watercraft.

The U.S. Forest Service closed the campground temporarily in mid-June for hazard tree removal with a planned opening by early July. Additional maintenance work may be conducted around the dam this summer (see fs.usda.gov/Umatilla for more information). Also starting in July is the ability to reserve most campsites on Recreation.gov while a limited number of sites remain available first come, first served.

If you are like me, fishing is the main draw when I visit a Blue Mountain lake. But that's only part of the experience.

There is also ample opportunity for hiking, swimming, bird watching, photography, mountain biking, wildlife viewing, and berry picking. Alternatively, you might choose to relax in the shade of a tall fir tree and consider the origin of ancient rock formations.

National forests restrict campfires

Chain saw use also banned due to high fire danger

EO Media Group

Due to the increasing fire danger, chain saw use is banned, and campfires, woodstoves and charcoal briquette fires are allowed only in campgrounds and other designated recreation sites on the Wallowa-Whitman, Umatilla and Malheur national forests, as well as in wilderness areas.

(The year-round ban on fires in parts of the Eagle Cap Wilderness remains in effect.)

Stoves and heaters that burn liquid or gas fuel are allowed.

All three forests have enacted Phase B of their public use restrictions.

Other restrictions include:

- Generators are allowed only when in the bed of a pickup truck or in an area that has been cleared of combustible material for a diameter of at least 10 feet.

• Driving motor vehicles is not allowed off developed forest roads or trails, except when traveling to a campsite within 300 feet of an open road. Motor vehicles are not allowed on roads that are closed by gates, barricades, berms, rocks, or logs.

• Smoking is allowed only in a building or enclosed vehicle, a developed recreation site or an area cleared of combustible material for a diameter of at least three feet.

The Bureau of Land Management also has issued the same restrictions on the Vale District.

ODFW sets meetings on hunt changes

SALEM — Staff from the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife (ODFW) will present proposed changes to 2022 hunting seasons, and answer hunters' questions, during a series of local meetings scheduled in July at agency offices across the state.

The only major potential change for 2022 big game seasons being considered is to archery elk seasons. Controlled hunting is being considered for certain Blue Mountains units where there are ongoing concerns with low post-season bull ratios, high archery harvest and hunter density, according to a press release from ODFW.

A more detailed proposal should be available at the local meetings and the Fish and Wildlife Commission is expected to make a decision about 2022 archery elk hunting at its Aug. 6 meeting. For more information on what is being discussed, see the big game hunting review page, <https://myodfw.com/articles/big-game-hunting-season-review>.

Meetings scheduled in Northeastern Oregon:

- Baker City district office (outdoors meeting), 2995 Hughes Lane, July 6 from 5-7 p.m.
- John Day, Zoom meeting — www.zoomgov.com/j/1619942747 — 4-6 p.m.

com/j/1619942747 — 4-6 p.m.

- Pendleton, Zoom meeting — www.zoomgov.com/j/1606343383 — 6-7 p.m.

• Ontario district office (outdoors meeting), 3814 Clark Blvd., 5-7 p.m. PDT.

- La Grande, Riverside Park, July 12 from 6-8 p.m.

• Enterprise district office (outdoors meeting), 65495 Alder Slope Road, July 12 from 6-8 p.m.
