8 p.m. on FOOD Restaurant: Impossible

A new episode called "Out With the Old, In With the New" takes host and chef Robert Irvine to San Diego, where he hopes to save Kaiserhof, a German restaurant where the owner is afraid to make changes for fear of disturbing his beloved late father's original design. Robert, however, flexes serious muscle to drag the restaurant into the present, helping the current owner understand that sometimes following tradition blindly can be fatal to a restaurant's longevity.

9 p.m. on A&E After the First 48

This follow-up to the hit true-crime docuseries "The First 48," which revisits some of that original series' most compelling cases to reveal the whole story behind them, launches Season 7 with a premiere called "Crossroads." The episode explores how two families in Tulsa, Okla., are torn apart by the brutal murder of a man who was gunned down and left to die alone in the street.

9 p.m. on STARZ Movie: Walkaway Joe

Actor Tom Wright made his feature directorial debut with this somewhat unevenly written 2020 yarn about an unlikely bond that develops between a wandering loner, "Walkaway Joe" Haley (David Strathairn), who is trying to escape his uneasy past, and a 14-year-old pool shark, Dallas McCarthy (Julian Feder), who is searching for his father, a swaggering hustler (Jeffrey Dean Morgan, "The Walking Dead"). Julie Ann Emery, Evan Gamble and Andrea Frankel also are featured.

10:05 p.m. on HBO Movie: Malignant

James Wan, creator of "The Conjuring" cinematic franchise, directed this 2021 psychodrama starring Annabelle Wallis (TV's "Peaky Blinders") as a woman who begins to have harrowing visions of people being violently murdered. Only belatedly does she realize the killings actually are happening in real life as well. Maddie Hasson, George Young, Michole Briana White, Jean Louisa Kelly, Susanna Thompson and Christian Clemenson also are featured.
