from beyond the arc every season of his career, while shooting 38.4% overall for his career.

"I'm very hyped," Pelicans center and power forward Jaxson Hayes, who is in his third NBA season, said of playing with McCollum. "I've been watching him since I was little, so that's going to be really fun for me."

In 2019, McCollum signed a three-year contract extension worth $100 million that runs through the 2023-24 season. It took effect this season.

Lillard, a six-time All-Star, has been sidelined since the start of the year with an abdominal injury that required surgery. Like Williamson, it is unclear when, or if, he will return this season, but Lillard was at the team's practice facility on Monday putting up a few shots.

Trail Blazers coach Chauncey Billups said Feb. 8 that he could not comment on the specifics of the trade because it had not been formally approved. But he did praise McCollum.

"He's just a professional scorer, man. I always said this even before I coached him: CJ has a 1990s-type game but with like a 2020s flow. He's so great in the mid-range area, he's able to create space, he's got every kind of left-hand, right-hand finish ... He's just a nightmare to guard."

Hart this offseason agreed to a three-year extension with New Orleans which is worth $37.9 million and includes a third-year player option. He has been a popular and productive role player in New Orleans since being traded to New Orleans during the 2019 offseason — along with forward Brandon Ingram, guard Lonzo Ball and two first-round draft picks — from the Los Angeles Lakers as part of a deal that paired Anthony Davis with LeBron James on the Lakers.

Ball has since been traded to Chicago. Hart has averaged 13.4 points and 7.8 rebounds this season.

Alexander-Walker was one of three first-round draft choices the Pelicans made in 2019. He went 17th overall, after New Orleans had taken Williamson first with their own draft choice and Hayes eighth with the first of the two first-rounders acquired from the Lakers.

Alexander-Walker has struggled to produce consistently in his first three seasons but has been prolific in spurts. He is averaging 12.8 points this season with a season-high of 33 points and a career-high last season of 37 points.
