

ODFW plans meetings to discuss new budget

EO Media Group

SALEM — The Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife (ODFW) is planning four online public meetings later this month to present information about the agency's proposed budget for the 2023-25 biennium.

ODFW officials will also take questions and comments from the public during the meetings.

ODFW is not proposing any increases in hunting or fishing license fees. The last increases were approved by the 2015 Legislature and took effect in 2016, 2018 and 2020.

The agency will use public comments from the meetings to help draft its budget request for the Fish and Wildlife Commission to consider during its June 17 meeting. Prior to that, the Commission will have a special meeting on May 13, also online and open to the public, to take public testimony about the proposed budget.

The budget proposal approved by the Commission then goes to the Legislature for its consideration in 2023.

ODFW headquarters staff will attend each of the four public meetings, along with regional officials, who will have local information for their area.

The schedule:

- Northwest Region, April 12, 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.
- Southwest Region, April 13, 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.
- Northeast Region, April 14, 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.
- Southeast Region, April 15, 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.

All meetings are accessible through the same link and phone number. For the video meeting, <https://www.zoomgov.com/j/1602917760>.

For phone only, dial 1-669-254-5252, or 1-669-216-1590, or 1-551-285-1373 or 1-646-828-7666. The webinar ID is 160-291-7760.

FISHING

The beauty of fly-fishing is it gives you exactly what you demand of it. The art of the angle can be complex or simple, technical or sublime.

Last year, over a Zoom presentation to a fly-fishing club, I talked to a guy who said he was going to go fishing again as soon as COVID was over. Meanwhile he was going to sit in on video fly-tying and travel discussions. I'm guessing that is what he wanted from fly-fishing, for the time.

A friend of mine was treasurer for a fly-fishing club in Portland. I invited him once on a dry fly trip to Chile and he was ready to buy his airline ticket when his fear of being found out kicked in. He was not as skilled as he wanted to be, he said. He confessed his casting skills were sub-par and his knowledge of bugs was lacking.

"I'm just not ready for a trip like that, Gary," he said. "Invite me next year.

Maybe next year I'll be ready."

I tried to point out that if he went on the trip I proposed, and that he was well able to afford, he would acquire the skills he wanted with the help of the guides and the fish. Along the way he would catch big trout and medium size trout and even a few small ones.

"Maybe I'll go on a trip around here and get the skills, I need," he said.

Do you think he did? I don't either.

There are always people that will tell you not to go fishing. I got grounded from fishing when I was in ninth grade because my algebra scores fell off. I got up earlier in the morning than my parents on a Saturday morning and went anyway.

Ask my dad if you bump into him on the river this season. Was it more important to Gary's future that he improve his grades from Cs to Bs in algebra? Or was fishing more important? Dad will say I did pretty good in geometry, especially the part that deals with the angle.

One time I was on the Kalama River in the middle of an epic steel-head bite and the office called my grandparents' house and wanted me to come in. Do you think I came off the river before dark? No. Did they fire me? No. I quit a month later. No one needs that kind of pressure.

I am not a fly-fishing guide but I find myself in the position of teaching people to fly-fish every season. Lots of times it's 11-year-olds or spouses of friends or people who show up on trips I'm on. The thing I spend the least amount of time on is the casting. Truth is, anyone who can pick up a fly rod and keep it off the ground is equipped to catch fish on small streams or still water. What they need is work on presentation, on theory, on line control. If they like fly-fishing, they can get a casting lesson next week. Think I'm wrong? Watch someone with a 7-foot tenkara rod.

They can't cast more than 12 feet at best, but they can catch fish all day long on good water.

People pick up fly-fishing for a lot of reasons. Catching fish may not be at the top of the list, but it is important enough a person should go fishing when they want to.

What do you want from fly-fishing? Are you getting it? If not, go out and demand it. Want to be a better caster? Go fishing. Then get a casting lesson. Want to learn more about bugs? Go fishing and turn over rocks. Want to multiply your fishing skills? Hire a guide.

If someone tells you not to go fishing for whatever reason — your health, your grades, their status or their money, you are better off going fishing anyway. Just get up earlier in the morning.

SATURDAY, APRIL 9, 2022
YOUR BIRTHDAY by Stella Wilder
Born today, you are clever, quick-witted, fun-loving and always ready with a kind word that can lift another's spirits and put a spring in their stride. Indeed, interaction with you is never dull, and most often results in a general improvement in one's overall mood and outlook -- so powerful is your own positivity and ability to laugh and get others to laugh with you. You do have a serious side, and at times you may actually withdraw from others and succumb to self-indulgence, but such phases do not last long.

SUNDAY, APRIL 10
ARIES (March 21-April 19) -- You're not likely to stay in your comfort zone for long today -- but is the change something you've manifested, or is it being forced on you?
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) -- Now is not the time to buck the system, for it can actually bring some good things into your life at this time if you work it very creatively.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) -- Someone you know may be having trouble, but who and why proves to be puzzling. You'll want to investigate and learn more by day's end.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) -- Showboating isn't likely to win you the results you're after today -- or the response you'd hoped for even from your friends. Cool it for now.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) -- Your concern over someone in the thick of things reflects your concern for yourself, too, for you know you're in a very similar situation.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) -- Listen to the warnings provided to you today, and change your plans accordingly. You'll find that you're not as vulnerable as some others.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) -- You may be singled out today for a very strange reason, but you can still parlay this into a major success -- if not now, then very soon.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) -- Take care that your criticism of someone's work is about the overall quality of the work, and not merely a difference in taste.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) -- You can avoid many small dangers today, but one is likely to sneak up on you and force your hand. Afterward, clean up the mess!
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) -- That which you cannot explain takes up much of your time today as a central concern. Are you giving this too much attention?
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) -- Approval isn't likely to come your way today -- at least not in the way you had hoped. Still, you should be able to stay the course.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) -- You may be reminded about the passage of time today as a friend resurfaces and shares memories of something that you, too, remember fondly.
