RICHLAND — The Eagle Valley Locals want to share their part of the world, and what better way than hosting a music festival?

"We're all huge music lovers," said Sara Artley, one of the organizers. "We feel like Richland is this hidden gem — we have a lot going for us."

The inaugural Chautauqua Music Festival is happening May 20-22 at Eagle Valley Grange Park. Featured bands are Tiller's Folly, Juni Fisher, The Wasteland Kings, Carter Junction, and JJQ (Jenni, Jon and Quinn).

In addition to music, the park will be filled with vendors. Offerings so far will include food stands — barbecue, gourmet hot dogs, coffee, desserts — as well as artisans. A "local crafter's booth" will be available to those who have local products but not enough supply for their own stand.

Interested vendors can request an application by emailing ChautauquaVendors@gmail.com.
