

Tunesmith Night concludes season May 14

Go! staff

ENTERPRISE — Bart Budwig, Patrice Webb and Willy Jay Tracy will join for the monthly Tunesmith Night on Saturday, May 14, at the Enterprise Odd Fellows Hall, 202 E. North St.

Doors open at 6:30 p.m., and the music starts at 7 p.m. Admission is $10. No food or drink service is provided, but attendees are welcome to bring their own.

This music showcase is presented by the Wallowa Valley Music Alliance. This show concludes the 16th season.

For those who cannot attend in person, the show will also be streamed live to WVMA's

Bart Budwig

YouTube channel and website, wvmusicalliance.org.

BART BUDWIG

Budwig now serves as the

Patrice Webb

resident sound engineer at the OK Theatre. American Standard Time says, "Sometimes when Bart sings, I forget what we're talking about. I'm sure he knows though. I trust him. He sounds like John Prine, plays like Hoyt Axton and looks like well ... Bart Budwig. He's a cosmic country lawn gnome. He's cherubic, cheery and an old soul. Songs spring from the dreams of his noon day naps, and punch the keys of his typewriter. When words won't take, he calls 'em in with a bugle of his trumpet, or a strum of soothing guitar."

PATRICE WEBB

Webb is an award-winning singer-songwriter from Sandpoint, Idaho. Her music is a mix of folk, country, swing and acoustic blues. She's won awards in the New England Songwriting Contest, The Walnut Valley New Song contest and the Jane Titland Songwriting contest, where she is a three-time finalist. She has just released a fourth CD titled

Willy Jay Tracy

"The Mountain, the Valley, the River, the Pine," which is an all-acoustic tribute to Idaho where she lives on a rambling 23 acres with her husband and a band of four-legged critters.

WILLY JAY TRACY

Tracy is a musician and songwriter who resides in Pullman, Washington. He is a founding member, singer and guitarist for Moscow, Idaho-based band Mother Yeti. In his solo work, his songs blend folk, soul and Americana.
