Dairy Report

Fluid Milk and Cream — Western U.S. July 21 Milk output is steady to lower in California Some contacts report no change in milk production this week, while others say higher temperatures and dry weather are contributing to declining volumes. Stakeholders say farm level milk production is above previously forecasted levels. Milk remains available for processing. Customers in nearby states, where milk inventories are tighter, are looking to California for available loads. Steady demand is present for all Classes.

Cow comfort in Arizona is being negatively affected by high temperatures. Contacts report this is contributing to lighter milk production. Milk inventories are tight, and some plant managers are sourcing milk from other states. Demand for Class I is trending higher, while demand is steady for all other Classes. Farm level milk production is steady to lower in New Mexico. Stakeholders say milk remains tight in the state, and some processors are purchasing milk from other states Contacts report steady demand for all Classes.

Overall milk output in the Pacific Northwest

Compiled by USDA Market News Service • Madison, Wis. is steady to higher, despite higher temperatures causing a decline in some areas. Milk inventories are available for processing in the area, and some plant managers are selling excess loads to other parts of the region where availability is tighter.
