Comments: Really good cow market this week. In our 35 years of owning a livestock market you can count on one hand the times the cow market has been stronger in August than it was in June, and you might say this is a first. The big cow numbers might not be there. USDA reports reduced cow kill across the nation. A few feeder cattle are starting to show up and the interest is picking up among the buyers.

Dairy Report

Compiled by USDA Market News Service • Madison, Wis. Fluid Milk and Cream — Western U.S. cow comfort and declining milk output.

Aug. 4
Milk output is mixed in California

Some contacts report that milk production has improved this week, and overall output was up in July compared to a year ago. Others are reporting that higher temperatures and dry weather have contributed to reduced milk production.

Milk is available for processing in the state, and some plant managers say they continue to send loads to other parts of the region. Contacts report increased sales of Class I. Demand for Class II and III are unchanged.

Farm level milk production is steady to lower in Arizona. Contacts report reduced cow comfort due to high temperatures in the state. Due to tight instate milk supplies, some plant managers are purchasing loads of milk from other parts of the region to meet their current production needs. Demand for Class Lis steady to higher, and unchanged for all other Classes.

In New Mexico, milk production is declining, and some contacts say output is down compared to this time last year. Processors in the state report they are purchasing loads from nearby states where inventories are more available Class I and III demands are steady, while Class I sales continue to trend higher. High temperatures in the Pacific Northwest are contributing to reduced

Despite this, milk is available for processing. Loads of milk are, reportedly, being sold to other parts of the region where supplies are less available. Some educational institutions are increasing their purchasing of Class I milk as they prepare for the fall semester. Demands for Class II and III are also trending higher. Milk output is declining in the mountain states of Idaho, Utah, and Colorado. Stakeholders say that milk remains available in the area, and that spot loads are being traded from $3 to $6 under Class IV. Some loads of milk are, reportedly, being sold due to labor shortages that are preventing processing facilities from running full schedules. Class I demand is steady to higher, while Class II and III demands are unchanged. Contract purchasers of condensed skim continue to pull heavily on supplies in the West. Some contacts report that they continue to sell spot loads of condensed skim, but that availability is tightening. Demand for cream is strong throughout the region, as ice cream and butter makers are running active schedules.

Stakeholders say cream inventories are tightening in the region.
