Talent a Century Hence.

The Talent News man, while he claims no kin to the famous Nye, whose front name is Bill, is a genius in his way, and although he claims no relationship to the tribe of Billies, above mentioned we are willing to make a very hard guess that he, Nye and the big mama bear, with a long red tongue, have all eaten salal berries from the same bush.

"Verily, the hamlet of Talent hath a wonderful future. With my trained eyes I will peer through the mists of the century to come and thou shalt know the truth. Knowest thou that the growth of a city dependeth upon the mighty men that dwell therein? Verily, there are many valiant men in Talent and they have great possessions; but their desire lyeth not in the way of building cities. One would sell all that he hath and journey to afar country, yea to the city of Oakland; another selleth goods in the market place and maketh bacon of swine's flesh, yea the flesh that was condemned under the Law; the desire of another is to thresh out the grain that groweth in the valley; and another putteth his shekels into banks and the town seeth them not.

Frank Torrey is over this week from Grouse creek and reports having struck the old pay channel that was lost 20 years ago. He struck it about a mile above the Patterson Bros. mines and says three pans of the dirt goes 30 cents to the pan. He has been prospecting for this old channel for five years off and on and is now ready to commence operations for a four months' run.—Valley Record.

My wife was confined to her bed for over two months with a severe attack of rheumatism. We could get nothing that would afford her any relief, and as a last resort gave Chamberlain's Pain Balm a trial. To our great surprise she began to improve after the first application, and by using it regularly she was soon able to get up and attend to her household work.

"Alas," sighed the heiress, "money is the root of all evil." "Miss Jingleton," he said with great feeling, "if you ever need one to share your trouble, I hope that you will not hesitate to send for me."

Country Uncle—Bless you, my boy, there's no end of fun in the country. You must come up when it's the season for husking bees. City Cousin (nervously)—Deah me! I shouldn't care evah to husk a be unless some one would first remove the sting.

lofty towers, extensive parks and lovely gardens. Electric railway runneth the length of the city. I see magnificent school buildings supplied with the most wonderful apparatus for use in teaching the beauties and wonders of the world around them. I see a mighty structure in the center of the city; yea it hath eight stories. On the front is an arch on which is written NEWS BUILDING. I look within. Wonderful to behold! Verily, the News is as large as the blanket that covereth a horse and it hath a million readers.

The Smith, Tufts & Ezell mine at Williams creek, has over 80 tons of good rock in the bin ready to haul to the mill when the roads dry off a little. A tunnel follows two paying leads of quartz for nearly 100 feet and the ore gets richer all the time.

The March gold brick of the Ashland Mining Company was 874 ounces of bullion, worth $5,010. This was the result of 21 days' run, the mill being out of ore for nine days during March, as the mountain road was so soft the teams could not haul over it.

W. E. Jacobs leaves soon for San Francisco with the 16 sacks of quartz he and E. K. Anderson purchased from B. Horn when he found the Last Chance pocket. He will take along with him a carload of the rich ore lately taken from the new owners, Jacobs, Ganiard, Tiffany and White. The ore will be run through a smelter to get the gold out.

Later indications, says the Grants Pass Observer, go to prove the fabulous richness of the Galls creek mine, near Rock Point, recently found by Mr. Horn. The parties who bought the claim of him, Messrs. Henry White and Ganiard Brothers have struck it still richer and are coining money by the thousands. They paid Horn $4000 for the claim, and have already taken out more than that amount since buying it. Bernard Arthur was at the mine Monday, and exhibited a fine piece of quartz about the size of a hen's egg, which is said to contain $11. He says the rock is plentiful and that the company is now making preparations to put in machinery to work the ore.

The Divided Skirt. This is from a San Jose paper and the lady spoken of is a sister of Photographer Rifenburg of this place: The divided skirt is a woman's purpose has made its way on the streets of San Jose. It is rightly informed, the honor of being the pioneer in this reform movement. She can be seen on the street almost any fine day, enjoying a canter astride her handsome bay, attired in a bifurcated equestrian habit made of gray cloth. She can mount and dismount with ease and agility, without the assistance of any lord of creation—another instance of woman's growing independence of man's help. Miss Rifenburg's bifurcated equestrian habit is so skillfully constructed that when she appears on the sidewalk only a close observer would notice anything unusual in her attire. When mounted, the skirt barely covers the foot and stirrup. There is nothing any more outre or immodest about the innovation than there is in the appearance of the ordinary lady-cyclist. When the fair daughters of San Jose first commenced riding the bicycle, man fashion, in the public streets Mrs. Grundy held up her hands in horror and passed caustic remarks about the immodesty of the girls who first had the pluck to introduce the sensible fashion. Now it has become so common that the street gossip does not even notice it. The divided skirt is a most appropriate costume for ladies who ride horseback. It is far safer and more convenient than the long side-saddle skirt from which numerous accidents, some of them fatal, have resulted. A girl in the bifurcated costume has better control of herself and of her steed, has a firmer seat in the saddle; is in less danger in case the horse shies or attempts to run away; rides with less fatigue; can go wherever she chooses, unattended, and is therefore independent. This sensible costume is likely to come into more general use, now that the ice is broken.

A Minister's Wife Much Pleased. Elder S. S. Beaver, of McAllisterville, Juniata Co., Pa., says his wife is subject to cramp in the stomach. Last summer she tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for it, and was much pleased with the speedy relief it afforded. She has since used it whenever necessary and found that it never fails. For sale by G. H. Haskins, druggist. The largest solid block of coal ever mined and moved in the Northwest, if not in the United States, was delivered safely at the entrance to mine No. 2 at Cle-Elum, Washington, April 10, and will be placed aboard the cars this week for shipment to the world's fair. General Manager Kangley, on his recent visit, gave orders for the specimen, and a score of the most experienced miners in the camp have been steadily at work for the past three weeks in cutting and moving it. The block is 24 feet long, 5 feet 8 inches wide and 4 feet 8 inches high, and weighs in the vicinity of 41,000 pounds, or nearly 22 tons.
