MEDFORD, FRIDAY, JUNE 23, 1893.

HON. LELAND STANFORD, California's greatest benefactor, died at Palo Alto, Tuesday night.

A READER OF THE MAIL in a distant land would needs hunt long and well to find the address of a real estate dealer in Medford—and then not find it.

THE flower and vegetable gardens and the fruit orchards in and about Medford are a most beautiful sight to look upon. Verily, this is the paradise of the world.

OF course Medford is all right, railroad or no railroad, but things would pop most mightily if Mr. Leadbetter should carry out his promised enterprises—and we still have faith.

It is being whispered that the fruit growers hereabouts will soon be getting anxious as to what they are to do with their fruit. It will then dawn upon these good people that some means ought to have been provided months ago for handling their products.

THE Chicago Mail, alluding to the editorial convention in that city, speaks of the "well-dressed moulders of thought." They fall several notches shy of being moulders of thought. They are the gilded coupon clippers of the "business office." The moulders of thought are at home picking cockroaches out of the paste pot.

SEVERAL of our exchanges are "running" an ad for the Canadian Music Folio. This firm owes THE MAIL $6.40—since last fall—and pays no attention to statements sent it. It is six dollars and forty cents charged to experience. We have a few more on the shady side of this same account and we will give our newspaper friends the profit on our experience in another issue of THE MAIL.

AN AMUSING spectacle is that which wends the pathway of disconsolate Medfordites back again to this God given paradise of ours after having been cooked to a turn 'neath the scorching sun's rays of Southern California. While the fact is amusing it is never-the-less flattering to our valley, and as they seek once more the clime that is most congenial and the populace that is ever kind, a hearty welcome is extended them.

MRS. HARRIS, mother of Carlisle Harris, who was electrocuted in New York recently for the murder of his young wife, has written numerous books, many of which have met with a most cordial welcome at the hands of the reading public. Strange as these things may appear, in view of these recent occurrences, the most popular and praised of her volumes was devoted to the home circle. One chapter was applied to instructing readers how to bring up children to be the pride of parents, and another told how to make home attractive to the husband. Young Harris' fate, and the fact that Mrs. Harris and her husband had long lived apart taken together with the conceded excellences of the publication, strikingly illustrate the wide difference between theory and practice.

AS the Medford business college building nears completion we often wonder if our good people realize the importance which this institution will add to our fast growing city? We wonder if you realize that it is the only institution of the kind between Portland and San Francisco and that such an institution will prove to be the best possible means of building up our city as an educational center? We wonder further if our people have loosened their purse strings as much as they ought? Not a business man is there in Medford but what can well afford to contribute toward the erection of this building—and make good interest on the money invested. The college is now built but there must be some assistance rendered else it may not be occupied as soon as is expected. The name, "Medford Business College," is one which will advertise our city the entire length of the Pacific coast. If Mr. Rigby is compelled to complete the college unassisted no person would have the right to say him nay should he christen it the "Northwest" or "Rigby" business college.

IT HAS not been the intention of THE MAIL to allure, or attempt to allure, our readers on to any desperate means regarding the prospects of railroad extensions, but we have always had an abiding faith in Mr. Leadbetter's intentions and we now have it from a source very reliable that the, to some, apparent inertia has not only strengthened our possibilities but has in reality made the success of the proposition more substantial than we had hardly dared to hope for, even in our most sanguine expectations. Upon Mr. J. S. Howard's return from Portland, recently, we interviewed the gentleman on the subject and while he is not at liberty to divulge any of the inside plans of Mr. Leadbetter and his associates he is open in his expressions of confidence and says that never before have our chances been so flattering as right at the present time.

AS TIME moves on, in away it got into the habit of doing years ago, and THE MAIL's subscription list grows larger the need of a new and more modern printing press becomes more noticeable, and every time our old Washington press is handspiked around—over two thousand times each week—with a muscular movement which gives one "that tired feeling" we disclaim our loyalty to the man who invented this great boon to county newspapers and extend our reach over into the arena of modern machinery and power presses. Our reach over into that realm hasn't come in contact with anything in the press line as yet, but if our subscribers who are owing us will sort o' wend their way in our direction with the necessary collateral we will strive mightily to place THE MAIL office on a level with all other things modern in this garden spot of the great Rogue.

A SORT of financial fatality seems to overhang the gubernatorial office in Ohio. Thomas L. Young, who succeeded Rutherford B. Hayes, died in comparative poverty in Cincinnati a few years after his retirement. A small salary, the proceeds of a petty political appointment, was all that saved him from absolute want in his declining years. Richard M. Bishop, very wealthy when he became governor, was bankrupt when his term closed. George Hoadly was ruined by security obligations during his term. Governor Campbell ran upon financial reefs and was totally wrecked during his canvass against McKinley. He was governor at the time and was a candidate for re-election, Governor McKinley's turn came next, his misfortunes being a matter of very recent history. The only exception since the close of R. B. Hayes' term has been Governor Foraker, who retired much poorer than he was when he assumed the office, but was not insolvent. The failure of Ex-Governor Foster the other day completed the list. And yet men will run for governor in Ohio—which shows that the Buckeyes are not a superstitious people.

Card of Thanks.

To the many friends who were so kind and sympathizing during the recent illness, death and burial of my husband, I tender my most heartfelt gratitude. It seems impossible for me to thank you enough. May God bless you for your kindness in my affliction.
Mrs. JENNIE M. FARIS.

MINES AND MINING.

The Comstock of Oregon mine owners expect to begin crushing ore next week.

G. L. Epps and Chas. Whitt, two young miners of Coleman creek, have struck a ten foot ledge of gold bearing quartz in that locality and are now at work sinking a shaft. When this is done they will start work on a tunnel.

S. P. Conger was in from his Gov. Chadwick mine last week. He tells that they have a ten foot vein and that they are at work with a good force of men getting out ore. He says the property is three times more valuable than his company supposed when the purchase was made.

The clean-up of the Miller mine, on Jackson creek, was finished June 19. The winter's run will net the owners nearly $7000. Eighty-seven ounces of gold dust was exchanged at the bank last Saturday, which was of a very fine quality, and was exchanged at a premium over the standard. This mine is one of the best pieces of mining property in Southern Oregon, and is not for sale.

Calif., at which place she will remain a few months, after which will make a quite lengthy visit to relatives in York state.

F. W. WASCHAW and family arrived in Medford Monday evening from Kansas City, Mo. These people come with the intention of locating if anything like a profitable opening in a business way presents itself. Mr. W. is a jeweler and should be located that will be the line of business he will follow.

Mr. and Mrs. CHAS. FRONK, of Albany, were in Medford last week visiting relatives and friends. Mr. Fronk, who, by-the-way, was at one time station agent at Medford, returned to Albany Sunday evening, at which place he is now the S. P. agent. Mrs. Fronk remains in Medford for a few weeks.

J. R. HARDIN and JORDEN BROWN, of Gold Hill, were in Medford Tuesday and spent a few hours in pleasant converse in THE MAIL shop. These gentlemen have some very fine mining prospects but just at present everything is sub rosa—just like several other good prospects which we will give out one of these bright, balmy mornings. THE MAIL hopes their prospects may only be exceeded by their general good fellowship, which abounds largely.

Mr. and Mrs. B. S. WEBB returned Sunday morning from their extended visit in the east. Mr. Webb reports a most pleasant trip—had a general good time and saw lots of grand things at the big Chicago show. His relatives whom they visited reside in many parts of the east and the only objection Ben raised was that they had to travel over too much country to make the rounds—like the boy who went after the cows. He had to go to the foot of the lane and then seater.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. CATHCART returned to Medford last Saturday from Sacramento, California. These people have arrived at the very sane conclusion that Medford in particular, and the Rogue river valley in general, is about the most proper place in which to establish a permanent abode that they have seen during their sojourn of a few months. Mr. C. expects to engage in some business in Medford, the nature of which our reporter failed to catch. A genial hearty welcome is extended these people and they cannot make their residence too permanent to please us all.

Mrs. F. M. PLYMALE accompanied by son and daughter, Johnnie and Meda, left Medford yesterday morning for a visit at Albion, Calif., with Mrs. J. W. Curry, daughter of Mrs. Plymale.

THE MAIL was quite agreeably surprised yesterday by a call by J. S. CROSS, formerly editor of the North Rose (N. Y.) Herald. Mr. Cross was at one time on our exchange list.

J. B. WELCH, one of the enterprising ranchers of Spikenard, was in Medford Wednesday, doing trading with our merchants. The gentleman reports the building of a new school house in that district by subscription, Mr. Welch, being a saw-mill owner, is generously donating the lumber.

A. C. HOWLETT, of Eagle Point, dropped in on us this week and spun us the following talk regarding the doings of things in that part of the county: A very successful term of school in that district closed last week with recitations, music and the reading of the Eagle Point Echo. Prof. Elliott has done good work. J. K. Green, from King's county, Calif., has been attending to business in that locality.

School Report—Dist. No. 29.

The school in District No. 29, known as the Lone Oak school, closed June 2. The following pupils obtained an average of 75 per cent or over at the final examination: Emma Kirk 98; Fred Kirk 97; John Dodge 97; Mae Kellogg 90; Tiele Pruett 88; Ella Dodge 75; John Bigham 78; Bert Kellogg 85; Niels Svendsen 91; Cecil Laws 83; Walter Bigham 75; Charles Bigham 88; Edward Kellogg 89; Ernest Wilson 88; Wendell Laws 95; Irvin Pool 88; Stephen Stinson 95; Maud Stinson 90; Donna Pruett 90; Jane Dodge 90; Jesse Bigham 90. Those who did not miss a day during the term were: Mae Kellogg, Tiele Pruett and Cecil Laws.
