The Washington shingle manufacturers have issued circulars stating that in the future they will sell to Eastern dealers carload lots at the same rate as that now given to Western consumers on a cash basis. This plan, while it will probably cause a fight among Western dealers, is expected to be of great benefit to manufacturers, as they will be able to sell all their product to Eastern buyers, thus saving the middlemen's profit.

The Redlands Cigarette has unearthed proof that the Riverside Orange & Citrus Exchange has contracted with Thacker Bros. to pack 100 carloads of inferior and frosted oranges, of which 87 carloads have been shipped in wrappers and boxes bearing the brand "Riverside Redlands," without a mark showing which town they were grown in. This also claims the exchange has contracted to pack Riverside fruit under the "Riverside Redlands" brand for Ransom Bros. An interview with Manager Perry of the exchange is published in which he admits the charge and acknowledges that the fruit shipped was so heavily frosted that the exchange did not want it shipped under its own brand. The chamber of commerce held a special meeting and denounced the brand, and took steps to advertise it extensively.

A startling crime was committed in the market square at San Francisco on the 15th. A man, identified as William Frederick Bonnett, entered the bank soon after the opening hour and handed a note, decorated with skull and crossbones, to the cashier, which contained a demand for money and a threat to blow up the building if the demand was not complied with. Herriek read the note and shook his head. Without a warning Bonnett drew a revolver and shot Herriek in the breast, killing him instantly. The bookkeeper shot at the assassin twice, but his aim was not effective, and Bonnett ran out of the door and up the street. He was captured under a house, where he had crawled to escape a pursuing mob. The dead cashier was a popular young man, aged about 30. At the police station the assassin was identified as William Frederick Bonnett, and he carried the arms to Folsom prison for Sontag and the other prisoners who made a desperate attempt to escape last year. Frederick was a friend of Chris Evans.

The prosecution closed its case somewhat unexpectedly, and the defense was begun sooner than the colonel's attorneys expected. He avers there was no intention on either side to marry.

Russian Agents Do Not Hesitate to Commit Burglary and Murder.

It is reported that a Russian agent had stopped for a chat with a friend who knows the devious methods of Russian government pretty well, says Pointy Beglow in Harper's Bazar. I told him my tale and asked him what he made of it.

"Nothing is simpler," said he. "You are politely requested to disappear from Russia at the shortest possible notice. You have been watched from beginning and end, and you may be watched at this moment. You might have been arrested a month in St. Petersburg, but you would never have got an answer to your request."

"But," said I, "what if I had gone on without permission?"

"You would never have known what had interfered with you. You would have been arrested at the first convenient place and kept a week or so pending the arrival of the proper authorities," said he, "some dark night your boats would have been smashed to kindling wood; your stores, papers and valuables would have been taken away and yourselves turned adrift in a swamp."

"But," said I, "you don't mean to say that a great government would permit such a thing?"

"Of course not. Our great government would expect the most thorough found regret at the accident; it would insist that the damage was done not by police agents, but by common thieves. In any event you would be stopped before you could get to the border, and you would never be able to prove that the government had stopped you."

"In Russia we are far ahead of western Europe," we were expected to say. "In America, only the government does the lynching. Here the government is obnoxious, reads or writes or talks too much, we do not bother about courts and sheriffs. He disappears—that is all. In his friends' eyes he is always after him the government shrugs its shoulders and knows nothing about it. He has been killed by robbers, perhaps, or he has committed suicide! The government knows nothing about it. The government is not responsible for every traveler in Russia, of course!"

"When a military attaché is suspected of knowing too much about Russian affairs his rooms are always broken into and ransacked. Not by the government, but by the police. The attaché is shocked! It is always done by burglars. But, odd to say, these Russian burglars always carry particularly for papers and letters."

The Russian military attaché has had his room broken into twice in this manner, and to prevent a third invasion, he has secured the chief of police that there was no use doing it any more; that he really never kept any important papers, and that he has not been troubled by official burglars."

UNFORGIVABLE SINS.

Others Which No Right-Minded Woman Would Commit.

Certain sins of omission and commission there are for which there is neither forgiveness nor absolution. A woman will forgive the man she loves for a thousand sins, but she will not forgive a man who has committed these sins. They are: 1. To be unfaithful to her husband. 2. To be unkind to her mother. 3. To be unkind to her father. 4. To be unkind to her children. 5. To be unkind to her friends. 6. To be unkind to her neighbors. 7. To be unkind to her country.

CHINESE RAILROAD OFFICERS.

More Interest in Velvet and Vase than in the Science of Railroads.

The Chinese officials on the railway are the most miserably responsible parties, and they are Chinese officials, a term which to anyone who has lived long in China sums up nearly all that can be said about them, says Macmillan's Magazine. The railway in all its parts and stages is to them a strange and insupportable thing, whose mysteries they are slower to learn than their uneducated fellow-countrymen, owing to their minds being already saturated with a kind of lore which has no relation of contact with the novelties introduced by the troublesome foreign devils. They detest the whole undertaking, which does not even provide such means of enrichment as any purely native work would do. Costly and very derogatory to them to handle any implement heavier than a hair pencil, and what is necessary to be done by officials is simply intrusted to their servants.

FACTS ABOUT ANCIENT RINGS.

In Olden Times They Were Generally Regarded as Tokens of Authority.

There was a peculiar significance attached to the rings which were regarded as a token of authority. The emperor's signet ring passed in the hands of an official invested him for the time with his master's power.

The emperor first mentioned in the Bible in Genesis, chapter 41 and 42 verse: "And Pharaoh took his ring from his hand and put it on Joseph's hand, and made him ruler over all Egypt." When the Israelites conquered the Midianites in the desert, they took their signet rings and offered them to the Lord. Abraham gave the ring from his hands to the Hebrews' worst enemy, thus giving him unlimited control to do with them and the money he wanted for a price. The father received his prodigal son joyfully, and sealed his forgiveness by putting a ring on his hand, says Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher, in Godley's Magazine.

Pharaoh's signet rings were regarded their rings both as business vouchers and as ornaments. The signet rings being always used for official purposes, and how-ever used, they were always buried with them—and in later years are often found in their tombs. The signet ring was usually of bronze or silver; but among the rich gold rings were used for ornaments. Ivory or bone pendants were worn by the poor. Plain gold rings, engraved with some motto or the head of their deities, were much prized; and three or four were worn on the fingers as well as on the thumbs. Among the Jews no ring was in full dress without the signet ring, and ladies had their rings set with costly white stones—rubies, emeralds and chrysolites being the most valuable.

A Gallant Cook and How He Tamed His Noble's Headdress.

Remarkable instances of gallantry are the subject of an article in the San Francisco Examiner, which says: In London a century ago it was no uncommon practice on the part of the noble to drink bumper to the health of a lady out of her shoe. The earl of Cork relates an incident of this kind, and to carry the compliment still further, he states that the shoe was ordered to be dressed and served up for supper.

"The cook said himself seriously to work upon it; he pulled the upper part, which was of fine damask, into fine shreds, and tossed it up into a ragout, mixed the soles, cut the wooden heel into thin slices, fried them in butter and placed them round the dish for garnish. The company testified their affection for the lady by eating heartily of this exquisite impromptu."

A Story About the Pansy.

A pretty fable about the pansy is current among French and German children. The flower has five petals and five sepals. In most panies, especially of the earlier and less highly developed varieties, two of the petals are pink and the other and three are gray. The two plain petals have a single sepal, two of the gray petals have a sepal each, and the third, which is the largest of all, has two sepals. The fable is that the pansy represents a family, consisting of husband, wife and four daughters, two of the latter being step-children of the wife, with only one child; the two small gray petals are the daughters with a claim each, and the large gray petal is the wife, with two claims. To find the father one must strip away the petals until the stamens and petals are bare. They have a fanciful resemblance to an ear of corn, and the large gray petal is the wife, with two claims.
