A TRIP EAST OF THE MOUNTAINS.

In company with Mr. Mont Stene (a visiting friend from Sioux Falls, South Dakota) I left Talent Wednesday, August 1st, bent on seeing the country and scenery of southern Oregon. We had a horse and buggy, and supplies and outfit for camping.

We went eastward as far as Yainax Indian agency—going via the Rogue river route, we took in the grand scenery of the falls of Mill creek, 175 feet perpendicular, and Rogue river rapids, which fall 300 feet in one-quarter of a mile, and if utilized would furnish power sufficient to run all the machinery of the country.

At Prospect we found a fine property of a saw-mill, a large hotel building nearly completed, a store of assorted merchandise, a good school-house a postoffice, several dwelling houses and as beautiful a site for a town or city as one could wish to see. Mr. Stan. Aiken aims to keep a hotel and supplies of all kinds, for sojourners to that health resort and enchanting locality. I take Mr. A. to be a business man and a gentleman.

For the next twelve miles we pass through a fine body of sugar pine and fir as the world affords. For miles one can scarcely see the sun in the middle, for heavy timber. The soil is rich and the surface gently rolling. Beyond Union creek we find an undulating valley more or less timbered for seventeen miles, when we commence to rise steeper until we come to a guide-board which directs to the left two and one-half miles to Crater lake. We followed an old road and a fresh buggy track, until we concluded to leave our horse to rest while we went up foot to view the lake. My companion gave out before reaching the lake and he was satisfied to take my word for the balance. We however, had a magnificent view of mountain scenery, and Klamath marsh, which, at present, is an immense lake. Leaving an altitude of 7000 feet we drove twenty miles, gently down 4000 feet, to old Fort Klamath. There remains nothing of the wretched grandeur of ten years ago, except two of those large "officers' quarters" and the magnificent grounds and spring of Coldwater. In a five mile drive, on a road fit for a city park, we reached Klamath agency. All of a sudden off to our right we noticed several new three-story buildings, then the lake about one mile off; but close to our right we suddenly came in view of a spring of water from which flows a stream of cold, clear water with volume and fall sufficient to run almost any amount of machinery or supply a city of 100,000. It all runs to waste except running a small saw-mill occasionally. There is a fine school-house and two boarding-houses, with 110 Indian students—fifty-five of each sex—in attendance. We attended chapel service at 11 a. m., Sunday, Aug. 5th. Rev. Father Starnes and wife, the missionaries, are well liked and doing much good. It did me good to hear the Indian choir of twenty voices singing of their Redeemer. We concluded that Jesus had conquered those one-time savages, and the "mission" is a success. Prof. Paine as superintendent, and Mrs. Paine as matron, are the right people in the right place.

We camped Sunday night on the bank of the Williamson river, near the bridge on the Yainax agency road. The place is famous for fishing, but my friend soon lost our hook in the vain attempt to "land" a rock. Reaching Yainax agency Monday evening we were hospitably entertained by Prof. Terry, acting superintendent in the absence of Superintendent L. F. Willetts, who is visiting in Jackson county during vacation. We learned that the school is making satisfactory progress with ninety students in attendance. These teachers govern by kindness and teach etiquette by example. All orders are indicated by taps of the bell, and the students and laborers act in uniformity—words being superfluous. The impressions left with strangers are that those Indians are nearer civilized now than the average white citizens' hoodlum children around our country schools. The Indian police patrol at all public meetings and keep perfect order throughout the reservation.

Wednesday we visited with my brother, in the Alkali valley, where he has a fine ranch, well improved for the time (three years) since settlement. He has twenty acres of the heaviest rye I ever saw. It grows on a dark, sandy soil—is seven feet tall and will make fully four tons of hay per acre.

My friend liked the Sprague river valley, and he stopped at the Shoo ranch to work and take time to select a claim on the surplus of the Indian reservation, while I reached Talent, Saturday, Aug. 11th.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflammation of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and then deafness follows. It is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and the tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever. It is a disease of the ear, caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

It will give One Hundred Dollars for any loss of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A VISIT TO DAMASCUS

A TRAVELER WRITES OF WHAT HE SAW IN THIS FAMOUS CITY.

Its Extensive and Interesting Bazaars—The Wonderful Walls of Damascus and the View One Has From Them—The Mohammedan Women and Their Masks.

The bazaars of Damascus are quite extensive and more interesting than those of Cairo, with which they are frequently compared, because they are entirely untouched by European influences. They are generally covered, and some of them have lofty roofs. In them are found all the products of the east. Caravans go from here to Bagdad and beyond, and a great deal of merchandise is carried to and fro. There are special large, pretentious buildings, with numerous domes, in which wholesale trade is carried on. It was a rainy day when we first went through the bazaars, and we appreciated the advantage of going shopping under cover.

The largest bazaar is in "the street called Straight." Its great roof extends for 2,000 feet, with small shops on each side. It is wide enough for carriages. By the way, this street is straight, though Mark Twain made a reflection indicating that the expression in the Bible (see Acts) was ironical. The consul who represents the United States government in Damascus is a Syrian, and that fact makes him a permanent officer. He is not obliged to turn over his office to somebody else when a new administration comes into power.

He received us very politely and detailed a "kawas" — a sort of official military escort — to attend us while we remained in the city. This is rather desirable, as it insures respectful treatment. Without such an escort we might have unkind remarks thrown at us, though a Mohammedan and the other a Jew's. We did not see the proprietor of the first, but the Jew took us into his library and showed us copies of the Jewish Scriptures on double rolls. As the reader proceeds he unrolls from one to the other. We also visited an English mission school for girls, in which the pupils had pretty and bright faces. They are mostly Greek Christians, but one "kawas," who is a Mohammedan, seemed to take great pleasure in pointing out his daughter in one of the classes.

Of the walls of Damascus only the lower courses date from Roman times. Above these courses is Arabian work, and still higher, Turkish. It is rather unfavorable to strong emotions when looking at the place where Paul was let down to observe that this part of the wall is Turkish, not more than 300 years old.

About the most satisfactory thing we did in Damascus was a ride to the northern suburbs, where from the slope of a hill we got a fine view of the whole irrigated valley, with the city set in a carpet of green, the streets of all sorts of brown and barren. The domes and minarets of the city make a very pretty picture, in the center of which stand the citadel and the great mosque, which was partially destroyed by fire only last year. Our guide pointed out to us the caravan route to Mecca and Palmyra, extending across the great desert to the horizon. This view gave us by far the best idea of Damascus and its surroundings. Twenty miles away we caught the gleam of a lake, into which the Barada (the Abana of Scriptures) pours its flood. Except in the spring it is rather a morass than a lake.

Our hotel at Damascus, the Hotel Diametri-Kara, was formerly the palace of a wealthy pasha, and it contained interesting specimens of decorative work of the first class. It is very well kept, and would make trouble. A very particular effect is produced by a figured muslin which many of the Mohammedan women wear over their faces. It makes them look like masqueraders with masks. You see something that looks like features, but it is not. A roughish eye may be twinkling under the gauzy material, but it is completely disguised. It is said to be unsafe in this fanatical community to show too much curiosity about the faces of the women. Damascus women have a reputation for beauty. I regret to say that we are unable to express any opinion on the subject. The uncovered faces we have seen ought not to get their owners into trouble.—Cor. Boston Herald.

Success of Mrs. Annie M. Beam, of McKeesport, Pennsylvania.

The treatment of diarrhoea in her children will undoubtedly be of interest to many mothers. She says: "I spent several weeks in Johnstown, Pa., after the great flood, and my husband was being employed there. We had several children with us, two of whom took the diarrhoea very badly. I got some of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy from Rev. Mr. Chapman. It cured both of them. I knew of several other cases where it was equally successful. I think it cannot be called an overstatement to say that 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by G. S. Haskins, druggist.

Eighteen years ago Jennie Finch of Grand Rapids, Mich., was kidnapped by gypsies and her relatives, failing to find her, mounted a party of men, and after she returned to her home and found her brother minister. A comparative statement of appropriations and expenses of the bureau of Indian affairs has been computed by Commissioner Browning. It shows that the total amount covered by the Indian appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1894 was $2,841,840 and for 1893 $2,828,889. The total appropriation for 1893 includes payments to the Yanktons, Yankinas, Cour d'Alenes, Siletz and Nez Perces for lands and payment for damages of settlers on the Crow Creek and Winneago reservations, aggregating $2,386,816. The amount for 1894 is $2,841,840, a reduction of $44,150 in favor of 1893. For every purpose except for payment for lands considerably less is appropriated for 1895 than 1894, and the total is $194,888 less than the estimates made by the office.

Universal Suffrage.

It seems to me that universal suffrage is the greatest uplifting and educating force ever set at work among the masses of men. It certainly gives form to many of the problems of modern society, but I have yet to learn of any period in the world's history when the masses were not full of problems. In the meantime, universal suffrage puts into the body politic the element that feels as well as the intellect that thinks. A man who is all intellect is not always wise in action, and our American communities as I have observed, not infrequently make decisions contrary to the judgment of the few, which ultimately are justified by the outcome.—Seth Low in Donahoe's Magazine.

Carnot and the French Presidency.

The French presidential canvass is developing into an active campaign. Carnot's bid of withdrawal is not accepted yet as final, and strong pressure is being brought to bear to induce him to stand. His poor health is not the only reason of his desire to retire. He is sensible enough to realize that the difficulties of forming ministries will be greatly increased if his withdrawal is not accepted. Disappointed candidates will not be so easily disposed of as seven years ago. A presidential crisis would be always looming in the distance. Mme. Carnot is in feeble health and dreads the renewal of her own social duties, and her husband, and her wishes have great weight with him.—Paris Letter.

In the Circuit Court, State of Oregon, in and for Alameda County.

Alfred B. Egan, Plaintiff, vs. Suit in Equity for Divorce. Summons.

Uly J. Egan, Defendant.

To Uly J. Egan, Defendant: You are hereby notified to appear and answer the complaint of the Plaintiff filed against you in the above entitled Court and cause by the first day of the next, the December 18th day of said court, to be held and held at the Court house in the Town of Jacksonville, County of Jackson, State of Oregon, on the 18th day of December, 1894, or judgment and decree will be taken against you therefor. And you are hereby notified that if you fail to so answer said complaint the Plaintiff will apply to the Court for relief demanded therein, to-wit:

That the bonds of matrimony between Plaintiff and Defendant be dissolved and judgment be given that the care and custody and control of the said child of Plaintiff and Defendant, be awarded Plaintiff; for the costs and disbursements of the suit and for such other and further relief as may seem equitable and just, on the grounds of your willful desertion and abandonment of the Plaintiff for a period of more than one year prior to the filing of this suit; and your cruel and inhuman treatment of and personal indignities towards Plaintiff rendering life burdensome.

This Summons is published in THE MEDFORD MAIL for six consecutive weeks, by order of Hon. H. K. Hanna, one of the Judges of the First Judicial District of the State of Oregon, made and dated at Jacksonville, Jackson county, Oregon, the 5th day of August, 1894.

Uly J. Egan, Defendant.

To Uly J. Egan, Defendant: You are hereby notified to appear and answer the complaint of the Plaintiff filed against you in the above entitled Court and cause by the first day of the next, the December 18th day of said court, to be held and held at the Court house in the Town of Jacksonville, County of Jackson, State of Oregon, on the 18th day of December, 1894, or judgment and decree will be taken against you therefor. And you are hereby notified that if you fail to so answer said complaint the Plaintiff will apply to the Court for relief demanded therein, to-wit:

That the bonds of matrimony between Plaintiff and Defendant be dissolved and judgment be given that the care and custody and control of the said child of Plaintiff and Defendant, be awarded Plaintiff; for the costs and disbursements of the suit and for such other and further relief as may seem equitable and just, on the grounds of your willful desertion and abandonment of the Plaintiff for a period of more than one year prior to the filing of this suit; and your cruel and inhuman treatment of and personal indignities towards Plaintiff rendering life burdensome.

This Summons is published in THE MEDFORD MAIL for six consecutive weeks, by order of Hon. H. K. Hanna, one of the Judges of the First Judicial District of the State of Oregon, made and dated at Jacksonville, Jackson county, Oregon, the 5th day of August, 1894.
