A meeting of the Mound literary society was held last Friday, and a goodly number of people were present. First on the program was a comic piece, read by Charles Schnellbocher, followed by a still more comic one by Nellie Roberts. Then F. Morgan sung "I'm the Daddy of a Little Black Coon." E. G. Roberts read a piece on lovemaking, which caused considerable merriment, and Mrs. Crabtree favored the audience by reading a selection entitled "Uncle Sam's Wedding." The Gregory quartette furnished excellent vocal music. The debate, subject "Resolved, that an old maid is preferable to an old bachelor," was warmly discussed; each side brought forth good arguments and scored a number of points, but it was decided in favor of the negative. The judges were, Mrs. Crabtree, Arthur Smith and Smith, A. P. Creed and F. Morgan;
