Many so-called remedies are pressed on the public attention on account of their claimed large sales. But sales cannot determine values. Sales simply argue good salesmen, shrewd puffery, or enormous advertising. It's cures that count. It is cures that are counted on by Ayer's Sarsaparilia. Its sales might be boasted. It has the world for its market. But sales prove nothing. We point only to the record of Ayer's Sarsaparilia, as proof of its merit:

The night the crime was committed, says the New York World, his daughter Mary, 13 years old, stayed at the home of William Cook in Perismouth. The next morning at breakfast she told her trange dream.

She said that it seemed that some one alled her father, and that he went out-ide, where he was murdered. After side, where he was murdered. After this she thought that she heard rappings in her room, and on the head of the bed in which she was sleeping. Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid or sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious feyers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at Chas. Strang's drug store.

EATING MEAT RAW.

A Curious Habit Said to He Increasing is

The well-known favor with which Englishmen regard underdone beef brings to notice a curious habit which is said by the New York Advertiser to be on the increase in London; that of cating meat raw, or nearly so. The habit started from a belief that it was conducive to health.

Of late years there has been a great run on the gravy or juice expressed from raw beef by the latter being squeezed into pulp; but, quite apart from this, many regular costomers buy enting the latter raw, each gustomer having an earnest belief that he bene fits in health from the practice. most cases it is more than a matter of health than of actual taste. There are two remarkable points about raw meat cating, one of them being that a great many butchers themselves constantly cut prime bits off and chew them.

The other point is that a great many people, who do not at homeest in a raw state the meat that they buy, judge the quality when buying by chewing a bit of raw meat, just as they might taste of butter or cheese. A celebrated London barrister eats quantities of the best steak finely mineed with salad, and in a great many other cases the meat is cut into very slim shreds and made into sandwiches, with seasoning added. Restaurant-keepers say that the chief call is for meat very much underdone, but there are great numbers of faddy people who eat meat absolutely raw

Some days before the ball a rehearsal eas held in a large suburban drillroom with peculiarly appropriate en-vironments, for a ball had been held the night before. The floor was so highly polished that French chalk had to be used to minimize that dread of all cyclists, side-sliding. Both the figures and the commands indicated a blend of though one indy in particular same several times, she did it so deftly that there was barely an interruption to the movement. Another lady in a Holland costume, turning sharply too near the wall, was unseated, but re-mounted so quickly that only an expert cyclist could detect that the move ment was not part of the rehearsal. We have not yet heard how the real ride went off, the mail not having brought the account to hand.-London

Great pots of molten metal go daily skimming along the Eric cullroad from the Cleveland Rolling Mills company central blast fornace to the Newburg mills as sedately as if this traffic was of long standing says a Cleveland letter. The plan is a perfect success. It takes just lifteen minutes for the metal, after it is poured into the big ladic cars, to reach the mixer in the mills, some five miles away. Eight trips are made a day, as follows: At 5:20, 8:20 and 11:20 in the morning, at 2:10 and 4:10 o'cicel. in the afternoon, and three trains at night. These trips are made at a time when the tracks are practically cleared. Thus delays are avoided, which would be expensive, for if long continued the metal would, ool and the purpose of the special delivery thus, be defeated. At the rolling miles the car is raised on a hole to the mixer, the ladle is tipped by mediacry, and the liquid metal poured into the mixer. Relieved of their load, the cars amble back to the furnace at their leisure, in time for the mext trip. About 500 tons of the hot metal is thus carried every day over this long railroad route. The Cleveland Rolling Mills company has to pay a pretty agare for the freightage, it is said, but there is economy in the operation.
